Maryland's Head Of WPA Resigns, Program Is Kept

Hopkins Accepts Mackall Resignation After Long Delay.

White House Parley Approves His Plan

Sought Lasting Good in Free State Fund Expenditure.

Resignation of John N. Mackall, who as works progress administrator for Maryland carried on a constant fight against "boon-doggling" and a return to the old CWA, was accepted yesterday by Harry L. Hopkins, national works progress administrator.

At the same time, Maryland Senators Tyding and Radcliffe announced, after a conference at the White House attended by Hopkins and Secretary Ickes, that the Maryland works program advocated by Mackall had been approved.

No official explanation of this paradoxical situation was forthcoming. Francis M. Dryden, former city engineer of Salisbury and former CWA engineer in Maryland, was appointed to succeed Mackall. Mackall expressed himself as pleased that his program had been accepted and said that he hoped it would succeed.

Mackall first submitted his resignation to Hopkins on June 19. Hopkins asked him not to press for an acceptance until the possibilities of modifying the Administration attitude could be explored. However, after no progress in this direction had been made, Mackall again submitted his resignation on July 26.

Wrote Hopkins Letter.

In his first letter of resignation, Mackall told Hopkins:

"Developments since I have discussed the matter with you seem clearly to indicate that the program on which this fund is going to be expended will be one in which 'employment from relief rolls shall be the program's first consideration, speed its second and the character of the work done shall be rated third.' This really means coming back to the old CWA program of doing the kind of work which will give immediate employment, but can not, for the most part, be 'useful' as set forth in the 'fundamental principles.'

"The results from this will be really more unsatisfactory than the original CWA program, because of the fact that the projects already undertaken or completed are the most desirable, and consequently those remaining for consideration are less desirable. Furthermore, the ability of the local governmental units to make supplementing funds available has been proportionately decreased so that the average of the projects under the new program will certainly be less desirable and lass satisfactory than those already completed. For the administration of such a program, I have no qualifications, and, frankly, no enthusiasm, and I feel that I am serving you best by asking you to accept my resignation at your earliest convenience."

Developed Program.

Mackall said that Hopkins subsequently asked him to work out a municipal program for Baltimore. He pointed out to Hopkins that he had developed such a program but that he had failed to get it approved in Washington. He gave this, as well as his previous reasons, as cause of his asking a second time that his resignation be accepted.

Mackall is an engineer and former chairman of the State roads commission.

The two Maryland Senators evidently succeded yesterday where Mackall had failed. They went to the White House intent upon a showdown. They presented Mackall's program and after the conference announced it had been approved.

President Roosevelt, in approving the program, made an exception to his rule that projects should not cost more than $1,140 per year per man. The projects approved include construction of a permanent nature that will cost considerably more than the limitations set.

A joint statement by Senators Tydings and Radcliffe referred to the conference as "very satisfac-

Clashes Mark Trial of Seven In Flag Insult

Sympathizers Stamp Feet as Attorney Compares Court to Nazis.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 7.—A near riot was precipitated in West Side Court today by sympathizers of seven men on trial in connection with the ripping down of a Nazi flag on the German liner Bremen July 27. Police radio cars were dispatched to the court and additional patrolmen were placed on duty.

The demonstration began when Roy H. Ellison, defense attorney, compared the court to those of "Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany."

Ellison defied Magistrate Thomas A. Aurelio to have him ejected from the courtroom, and many persons applauded the lawyer's stand by shouting and stamping their feet.

After some semblance of quiet had been restored, Tony Ables, 38, was convicted of disorderly conduct in connection with the disturbance and the cases of the six others were adjourned until August 14. Four of the remaining defendants are accused of felonious assault.

Magistrate Aurelio, pounding his gavel above the din, invited one of the attorneys to leave the court and threatened to report "the entire matter to the appellate division," which passes on the conduct of the legal fraternity.

More than 200 detectives and policemen were assigned today to guard the Hamburg American Line pier when the liner Hamburg sails for Europe tonight. The pier was the scene of the riot in whcih demonstrators tore the Swastika flag from the mast of the Bremen and hurled it into the Hudson River.

One passenger aboard the Hamburg will be Paul W. Kress, the Bronx masseur, who was refused a license to work here by Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia on the grounds that Germany had discriminated against American citizens. The incident aroused considerable controversy both here and abroad.

Britain Asks Italy to Halt Press Attack

Formal Protest Made on Campaign of National Newspapers.

Tri-Power Parley Aimed to Avert War Is Set for August 16.

The Italo-Ethiopian Crisis.

Britain yesterday protested officially the attitude of Italian papers toward England.

August 16 was set as the date for the tri-partite (Britain, France, Italy) conference seeking solution of the East African trouble. It will be held in Paris.

Official figures reveal that Italy has transported 240,000 men through the Suez Canal at a cost of $10,000,000 Meanwhile, Italy has issued another call for officers.

By the Associated Press.

London, Aug. 7.—Great Britain has made "strong representations" to Italy because of the bitter anti-English press campaign there, it was disclosed today.

Continued Italian press attacks upon Britain are being carefully watched. If necessary, it was learned, new representations may be made.

London is much annoyed by the continuance of the attacks. Since the Italian press is controlled, officials here look to Mussolini to halt the campaign. The recent representations, made to Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador, July 26, were kept secret because it was felt then they might hurt the chance of success of deliberations at Geneva. No reply has been received from Italy, an official source said.

To Let France Lead.

Uneasy over already frayed relations between this country and Italy, the government decided to let France take the lead in next week's tri-power talks at Paris. The decision was reached before Baldwin departed for Aix-les-Bains, France. This decision, however, did not mean any relaxation of Britains determination to uphold the sovereign rights of Ethiopia, especially in view of the declaration by Anthony Eden, minister for League affairs, that he would assume responsibility for putting the issue squarely before the League of Nations council September 4 if the forthcoming tri-power conferences failed.

Although MacDonald, former prime minister and now lord president of the council, became nominal head of the government, Baldwin was expected to maintain private contact with Eden while both are in France next week.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 7.—The conference between France, Italy and Great Britain for discussion of Italo-Ethiopian settlement was set tentatively today for August 16 in Paris. The date was proposed in talks between Premier Pierre Laval and the British and Italian ambassadors.

The conference, agreed upon in negotiations carried out by Anthony Eden, British minister for League of Nations affairs, is expected to point to a program of settlement which will be taken up by the League council when it meets September 4.

The definite announcement of the date awaits the approval of London and Rome. Eden will represent Britain and Italy's negotiator will be Baron Pompeo Aloisi, who also represents his nation in the League council.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Aug. 7.—The Italian public acclaimed Benito Mussolini and his militant East African program today as the press derided the League of Nations and Great Britain.

Hard upon the heels of yesterday's communique calling 75,000 men to the colors, the war department ordered more potential officers here and abroad to begin training.

[Rainy Evening]

WASHINGTON. Is There Any?

ALL summer the heat had assailed him and last evening he came from his office to find it cool and a mist falling and the sun gone . . . That early it was already dark and lights shone from autos on a wet street and glistened, as they do in the city in wintertime . . . And it was like autumn, somehow, with nostalgia in the air . . . People were hurrying and their faces were turned toward home . . . Yes, it was like autumn and the man felt a sort of emptiness in his breast and a sort of yearning, such as one has when the smoky smell of autumn is in the air . . . The heat of a thousand stuffy apartments seemed suddenly to have gone and those who hurried past in buses and street cars no longer seemed haunted . . . They had seemed that way for weeks past, he recalled, but now there was no heat and their faces were changed . . . Perhaps they, too, had felt the touch of autumn in the midst of summer . . . Relief was writ upon them . . . They were hurrying home . . . A man whistled on the street, bending his head to the mist that struck him . . . The restaurants with their air-cooled advertising no longer beckoned nor the cool seats in cold movies allured . . . The man thought, feeling silly, that a fire would seem good in the open grate that evening . . . At least it was cool enough to read . . . Yes, it was like autumn and, walking, he thought the thoughts one has in the season when the chill comes with evening and it is good to be home . . . It was an east wind and a storm had come to the city from a New England sea . . . There seemed to be salt in the mist . . . Salt and a yearning, but more than all else something to be grateful for . . . And that was the chill that made one shiver hurrying along the street . . . wanting to be home . . . No longer oppressed by the weight of heat bearing down even in the darkness from a cloudless sky . . . No, there were clouds there, heavy-laden and beneficent, clouds that brought a sort of peace . . . It was autumn in the midst of summer, as moving and as wondrous as the sudden hint of August frost in Vermont hills . . . People hurried again, and they hurried home, for home on a chill evening was something that had not been for many weeks In the suburbs trees dripped with their dampness and looked cool and lawns in the early darkness looked new-born from their drenching . . . It was a night to be indoors, a night for the feel of wool and the warmth of closed doors . . . The first such night in how long? . . . And the man thought, being a newspaperman, perhaps there's a story in this . . . And then he knew there was, for himself at least, for out of the cool bath that had swept a parched city with its fingers of fall there had come again the urge to write something . . . And he knew, looking at people hurrying to their homes, that they had sensed, in an evening that had come down earlier than for a long time, the same stirring that he had felt as he came out of his office into the darkness, onto the wet street glistening under the moving lights, as in an Eastern city in November at theater time . . . But perhaps, after all, there is neither time, nor place, nor story to all this . . . Only a mood . . . A mood of one from a North country who had felt for a moment the blessedness of the brief dissipation of the heat . . .

Hurley Denies Receiving Fee For Lobbying

Ex-War Secretary Tells Quiz $100,000 Was for Legal Aid.

Says He Doesn't Know Hopson's Whereabouts; Maryland Searched.

By Felix Bruner.

Search for the elusive Howard C. Hopson, utilities magnate wanted by Senate and House Lobby Investigating committees as a witness, turned to "somewhere in Maryland" last night.

Yesterday, the Senate Lobby Committee concluded a stormy session at which Patrick J. Hurley, former Secretary of War, was the central figure. Hurley emphatically denied that he knew of Hopson's whereabouts or that he represented him in any capacity.

John J. O'Connor, chairman of the House Lobby Investigating Committee, still promised that Hopson would be found soon, but declined to explain his reason for turning his search for the missing witness to Maryland.

Hurley, whose home was invaded by process servers looking for Hopson Tuesday, had no more than taken the witness stand before he was engaged in a heated altercation with members of the committee, an argument that lasted during the entire hour and a half in which he testified. The committee brought out the fact that Hurley's law firm had received $100,000 during the last three years for services rendered for the Associated Gas & Electric Co., controlled by Hopson.

Denies Lobbying.

Hurley denied that he had ever acted in the capacity of lobbyist.

"Anyone would be foolish to employ me as a lobbyist," he said. "My services wouldn't be worth a nickel with this Congress."

The only other witness was Joseph P. Tumulty, Washington lawyer and former secretary to Woodrow Wilson. He testified that he had been paid $33,500 for representing four utility companies, but denied he had engaged in any lobbying activities.

Hurley began to read his testimony in the Pecora securities investigation in which he explained his relationship with the utility company. He was interrupted by Chairman Black, who asked him how much he had been paid.

"I don't object to telling," said Hurley, "but why single out a Republican? Why not ask Martin Conboy, who represented Albert H. Wiggin? Why not ask John W. Davis what he was paid?"

Black continued to insist on an answer and Hurley continued his attempt to read from the record. Both were talking at once. Hurley arose to his feet.

"Sit down, sir," shouted the Senator.

Hurley resumed his seat.

"I'm a goldfish, and you are free to see me from every angle," he said.

Hurley said that he had been paid $50.000 in 1933, $25,000 in 1934 and $25,000 in 1935 as an attorney for the holding company, but that he did not at present represent the company.

When the witness attempted to resume his reading of the record, Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), Washington, interrupted.

"Did you tell that committee that while Hopson was getting $580,000 a year out of the company through a private milking process the stockholders were getting nothing?" he asked.

"My answer is that I don't know whether that statement is true or not," Hurley replied.

Protest Vote Against New Deal Seen in Election Reversal.

By Robert C. Albright.

Consternation among Democrats at Rhode Island's crushing defeat of an Administration candidate for Congress was frankly voiced yesterday in Capitol cloakrooms, with scattered words of admonition against New Deal trends.

A strong group of Senate Democratic conservatives, led by Senator Peter Goelet Gerry, of the plantation State, candidly regarded election reversal and refusal of State bond issues for PWA projects as a "protest" against a broad range of New Deal legislation, culminating in the President's "tax the wealthy" bill.

"It poin'ts a distinct trend," said Gerry, who, it was learned, had warned Democratic chieftains of the precariousness of the Administration's grip in Rhode Island.

The undercurrent of Democratic comment was accompanied by jubilant Republican statements, ranging from a prediction of a Republican triumph in 1936 to a speech in the House by Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell, hailing the "change that is taking place in this country."

Old-line Democratic wheelhorses —those few who would comment at all—ridiculed suggestions that the Rhode Island returns pointed a national anti-Administration trend.

One of these, Representative John J. O'Connor, of New York, replied to Snell's House speech with the caution to Republican colleagues "not to sit back and go fishing and hold their breath until November, 1936."

Privately, however, several party conservatives conceded that President Roosevelt's policies are on the defensive throughout the New Eng-

Jackson Urges New Provisions

The Tax Situation.

Spokesmen for the United States Chamber of Commerce severely assailed the tax bill as confiscatory before the State Finance Committee.

Robert H. Jackson, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel, asserted relief would be given to 95 per cent of all corporations while increasing taxes of 5 per cent owning most of the corporate wealth.

Some Democrats and Republicans saw this measure contributing to defeat of Democrats in Rhode Island.

Borad of Tax Appeals held that Charles E. Mitchell, former New York banker, made frauudulent transfer of stock to wife and that he owes the Treasury more than $1,000,000 in unpaid income taxes.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Spokesmen for organized business yesterday again clashed with the New Deal when representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce sharply assailed President Roosevelt's "share the wealth" tax bill as confiscatory and a deterrent to economic recovery.

Speaking before the Senate Finance Committee, the Chamber spokesmen raked the tax bill fore and aft, striking not only at underlying policies of the measure, but demonstrating that, in parts, it was crudely drafted, especially the inheritance tax section, which it was argued would be almost impossible to administer.

Earlier in the day Robert H. Jackson, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel, speaking for the Treasury, made a plea to the committee to adopt the President's proposed graduated corporation tax rates and taxation of intercorporate dividends, provisions spurned by the House.

In a lengthy statement, Jackson in his second day on the witness stand described a concentration of corporate assets in this country which he termed "startling." He pointed out, for instance, that over 53 per cent of the value of all assets owned by corporations in this country was owned by 618 corporations, constituting only 2-10 of 1 per cent of the number of corporations.

Revenue Emphasized.

Just as he did Tuesday in his testimony regarding the death and individual income tax proposals, Jackson laid emphasis on the revenue aspects of the graduated corporation income tax, instead of its social consequences, in contrast to the President's message in June. The Administration apparently is desirous to get away from the position of fighting "bigness" in business.

Jackson projected his whole argument for graduated rates on corporate income on the contention, not that bigness was an evil which should be penalized, but that big corporations should be taxed at a greater rate than small corporations because the former are stronger and better able to pay. He argued the graduated rates would give the Treasury a more stable flow of revenue from corporate sources.

His remarks on Tuesday describing the comparative ease with which the proposed inheritance levies, on top of existing estate taxes, could be met by the Henry Ford estate, was sharply challenged by several witnesses yesterday. They thought that in all probability the Ford estate would be confiscated completely by the proposed inheritance taxes.

Democrats Hostile.

As the Chamber of Commerce laid down its barrage on the tax bill in a series of apparently thoughtfully prepared papers, the hostility of Democrats on the finance committee toward the measure became increasingly noticeable. Their remarks indicated irritation and dissatisfac-

Rockville Asks Judge's Arrest In Traffic Case

Turbulent Council Session Votes Prosecution of Town's Magistrate.

The Rockville Town Council last night unanimously adopted a resolution calling for the arrest of its only police magistrate, Harold C. Smith, and for the appointment by the circuit court of a special magistrate to try him on an overtime parking charge.

The council action was taken in answer to Judge Smith's refusal to try town and county officials on parking offenses and because the judge—arrested for parking overtime last Friday—is manifestly unable to try himself.

It will be the case of Douglas M. Blandford, Mayor, and the Town Council of Rockville in the State of Maryland vs. Judge Smith.

The council resolution instructed the town attorney, F. Barnard Welsh, to draw up the warrant for Smith's arrest today, naming himself and Mayor Blandford as plaintiffs and the judge as the defendant.

Inasmuch as a defendant, to be properly arrested under Maryland law, must be given some idea of when he may expect to be brought into court, the council also decided tentatively to set Wednesday at 10 a. m. as the date for Judge Smith's trial.

Last night's meeting was one of the most turbulent the town's fathers have seen in many years. Mayor Blandford was mad, the council was mad, and so was Welsh.

They were mad because Wednesday, three weeks after the council had named Lester B. Thompson to

The Flood Toll.

Flood waters yesterday swept over portions of West Virginia, Ohio and Wisconsin, taking a toll of at least three lives, forcing hundreds to flee their homes and causing untold damage.

From Manila came word that 126 persons met death in last week's flood which caused damage exceeding $1,500,000.

While these sections face water danger, Midwest America, after a brief respite, again faced a tenacious heat wave. One death was reported, adding to the toll that already has exceeded 150.

Mild rains cheered and cooled Washington yesterday, while floods in West Virginia, Ohio atnd Wisconsin caused several deaths and undetermined damage, a heat wave in the Middle West caused other deaths and floods in the Philippine Islands killed more than 200.

Temeperatures here ranged from 66 to 69, while a slow rain totaled only .65 of an inch. The sun will come through again today, said the Weather Bureau, and temperatures will rise, but not to extreme levels.

In West Virginia, 12 to 15 hours of steady rain so flooded rivers and creeks that a half-dozen towns faced isolation. The Buckhannon and Kanawha rivers were rising, and Buckhannon and Glenville were endanged. Losses in the northern

Small Home Shortage Is Seen As District Building Increases

President of U. S. Building and Loan League Calls Capital 'Nation's Brightest Spot;' Predicts More Construction.

The country is moving into a small housing shortage and reconstruction will begin with the building of small homes, Morton Bodfish, executive vice president of the United States Building and Loan League, said yesterday. The league, according to Bodfish, represents 80 per cent of the assets of the Nation's building and loan associations.

Building and loan resources at the present time, Bodfish said, total between $6,000,000,000 and $7,000,000,000. In 1932 they were about $9,000,000,000, of which $1,000,000,000 was taken over by the Home Owners Loan Corporation.

"Money in the form of savings is coming into building and loan organizations in amounts greater than withdrawals," Bodfish said. "The demand for loans for small houses is mainly for refinancing, but the requests for loans for new construction gradually are increasing."

As evidence of an impending shortage in small homes, Bodfish pointed to the fact that nearly all of the homes that have been repossessed by building and loan concerns are rented on a self-sustaining basis and that a substantial income is being received from repossessed property.

Washington, according to Bodfish, is "the brightest spot in the country." "This is evidenced not only by new construction, but by a constant demand for loans for modernization."

"We are moving into a favorable market for small residential properties," Bodfish said.

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt placed seven independent lending agencies under supervision of the Budget Bureau. These agencies have to do with loans on homes and farms. They are the Federal Home Loan Bank Board, the Home Owners Loan Corporation, the Federal Savings and Loan System, the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation, the Federal Housing Administration, the Farm Credit Administration and the Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.

After September 15 the organizations will not be permitted to incur obligations for administrative expenses not approved b ythe Director of the Budget. President Roosevelt said he hoped eventually to bring all emergency Government units under supervision of the Budget Bureau.

Post and Rogers Land Plane At Juneau on 1,000-Mile Hop

By the Associated Press.

Juneau, Alaska, Aug. 7.—Wiley Post, noted flier, and his companion, Will Rogers, humorist and film star, arrived here in their monoplane at 5:35 p. m. (8:35 p. m. Eastern standard time) today after a 1,000-mile flight from Seattle.

The fliers were invited to be the guests of John W. Troy, Alaska Governor, during their stay in Juneau. They did not indicate how long they intended to remain or what their plans were.

The Oklahoma round-the-world flier and his wise-cracking crony of the airways hopped from Seattle at 9:15 a. m., Pacific standard time, in the big low-winged monoplane in which Post and his wife expect to continue to Moscow.

Mrs. Post, deciding at the last minute the flight might be "too strenuous," remained here. She said she would take a boat and join her chunky little husband "within a few days."

While the Posts planned a leisurely "pleasant jaunt," on over Siberia to Russia, Rogers indicated he would remain in Alaska.

"You know," said Rogers, "I've got to get a polo team going at the colony. It's the only thing the Democrats haven't done for those colonists."

"We may have to stop and get a fish dinner at Ketchikan, before we get to Juneau," Rogers wisecracked to the small group on hand for the take-off.

Post spent Friday and Saturday getting his plane ready for water landings—substituting pontoons for the wheels on the new red ship that has replaced the famed Winnie Mae in which he circled the globe.

Rangers Risk 2,000-Foot Drop, Rescue Pair Trapped on Cliff

By the Associated Press.

Yosemite, Calif., Aug. 7.—Crawling down the steep side of a granite mountain where a misstep would have meant a 2,000-foot plunge to death, park rangers today rescued Miss Elizabeth Lorimer, 23, of Chicopee, Mass., and her injured companion, Robert Pate, 35, of Inglewood, Calif.

Miss Lorimer appeared little the worse for the ordeal, although she spent the whole night hanging to a rock for her life. She was clad only in a hiking costume with shorts.

Pate, badly injured, had to be lowered to the valley floor on a stretcher with ropes. It was reported he had a broken shoulder, a badly gashed head and was suffering from loss of blood.

While a crowd of vacationists, including Pate's wife and the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Lorimer, looked on, the rangers climbed to the top of Half Dome, the granite peak, and then descended about 2,000 feet to reach the trapped pair.

Miss Lorimer and Pate became trapped on the ledge late yesterday. They built a fire, signaling their predicament to the vacationist camp 2,000 feet below.

Camp Chief Ouray, Colo., Aug. 7 (AP).—Airplanes circled granite faced Lindbergh Peak while a dozen posses searched today for William Bode, 15, of Memphis, who fell from a cliff in an audacious attempt to scale the mountain. Searchers said there was "only a chance in a hundred" the youth was still alive.

Brode, son of a Memphis broker, started the ascent yesterday with Robert Henderson, 15, of Omaha, Nebr., who was on vacation with him at the Y. M. C. A. Camp here.

Bill Preventing Gold Suits Due To Pass Today

Opponents Say Treasury Official Resigned to Protest Plan.

Driving through stormy opposition toward a probable vote today, the President's gold bill, barring dollar devaluation suits against the Government, yesterday ran headlong into a charge that a high Treasury official resigned rather than support its provisions.

Regardless of stinging criticism and charges of "repudiation" by Republicans and conservative Democrats Administration leaders expect a modified measure to pass the Senate.

The report that John G. Laylin quit his job as assistant general counsel of the Treasury, declaring he would take no responsibility for the gold-clause bill, was carried to the Senate by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan.

"I understand Mr. Laylin resigned and wrote a blistering letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, hanging his resignation on the fact that he would have no part in the repudiation of this matter," said Vandenberg.

Report Questioned.

"Is that information wrong?" he asked Chairman Duncan U. Fletcher of the Senate Banking Committee.

Fletcher said if it were true, he did not know it. Senator Alban W. Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, also interrogated, said:

"I do not know whether he resigned and I do not care whether he resigned."

"If there is any former official of the Treasury who felt so keenly about the immorality of this legislation that he resigned in a letter to the Secretary indicating his feeling of outrage in respect to it, I think it (Laylin's letter) is an important exhibit," Vandenberg persisted.

A personal clash between Senators Thomas D. Schall (Republican), of Minnesota, and Tom Connally (Democrat), of Texas, was terminated only when Vice President Garner admonished Schall to "conduct himself according to the rules."

The Minnesotan had complained that Government censorship had prevented members of Congress from getting information on the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. When Connally asked what Schall would do with the information, he hotly retorted:

"Pearls Before Swine."

"I would not present it to the Senator from Texas, because it would be like casting pearls before swine."

The Administration bill now before the Senate carries a committee amendment permitting gold-clause suits for six months after enactment, whereas the House bill barred suits at any time after passage. Leaders obtained a last-minute limitation on debate in an effort to hurry passage.

A biting attack was opened against the bill by Senator Alva B. Adams (Democrat), Colorado.

He said there is no warrant for its passage on the basis that it might cost the Government money otherwise.

"The virtue of the United States should not be sold at any cost," he said. "If we can shut the doors of the courts on one issue, we can do it on another."

When Barkley observed that other governments reserved the "sovereign" right to deny suits against them, Vandenberg observed:

"Then the final, hard, cold-blooded, brutal fact is that the Government can give no guarantee to the investor."

Senator George W. Norris (Democrat), Nebraska, argued that a "government's right not to be sued" is one of the "fundamental" rights of all governments, to which Vandenberg retorted:

"I know of no instance in American history where the Government without necessity has broken its word."

Danzig Trade War Brings 15 Arrests

By the Associated Press.

Free City of Danzig, Aug. 7.—Danzig police seized 15 Polish peasant women for trying to go home with Danzig money today just as encouraging signs appeared for settlement of the customs "war" between Poland and the Free City.

The women, who had run into difficulty in exchanging the gulden they received for their wares at the Danzig market into Polish zlotys at the Bank of Danzig, tried to recross the border with 600 gulden (about $90) still in their purses. They were fined 5,000 gulen (about $600) for this breach of Free City regulations.

A statement here said there was "a possibility of an understanding" in the customs row, precipitated when Danzig's Nazi Senate decided to permit German goods to enter the city free of duty, but levied double tariff on other foreign goods destined for Poland. Poland retaliated with rigid frontier surveillance.

lenbach and Hurley all talking at once, the Senators tried to pin the witness down to a yes or no answer.

"Why don't you ask me whether I have quit beating my wife? It's the same kind of question," Hurley said. "You are not treating a man like a citizen of the United States. You are trying to put something in my mouth that I didn't say."

After considerable more insistence, Hurley said:

"Of course, I didn't say it, because I didn't know it."

Hurley said he had appeared before the Federal Trade Commission as well as before Congressional committees in behalf of his client. He said his services in connection with the Wheeler-Rayburn bill included getting a hearing before the House Committee for his clients.

"Never have I spoken to any Senator or Representative privately about the Wheeler-Rayburn bill," he said. "The idea that I have been lobbying is absurd. I have no influence with Congress."

Rebels Second Time.

At another point Hurley complained:

"You are trying to make me say things. All of you gentlemen are prosecutors."

Senator Black insisted that Hurley recite in detail the services performed for the holding company. He said, among other things, he had studied the constitutionality of the holding company bill.

"Of course, I found it unconstitutional," he said, as the audience laughed.

Closing his testimony, Hurley tried to make a statement involving his social philosophy. He stood as he talked and waved his right arm. As he neared a climax, Senator Black asked:

"Mr. Hurley, why don't you use your other arm a while?"

The witness advised that the Senate committee study the golden rule.

Tumulty's Testimony.

Tumulty testified that he had been paid the following sums as a lawyer for utility companies: American Waterworks Co., $6,000; Commonwealth Southern, $12,500; Public Service of New Jersey, $2,500; Cities Service, $12,500. He said that of the total he had paid former Senator Moses $5,000 and Timothy T. Ansberry, Washington lawyer, $2,500, for assisting him. He said that he intended to pay John Walsh, brother of the late Senator Walsh, of Montana, $2,500 for similar services.

At the close of the hearing Senator Black announced that telegraph office managers in 11 towns had revealed that of 14,782 telegrams concerning the holding company bill sent from their offices only three were not paid for by utility representatives.

Meanwhile, Senate and House conferees on the holding company bill held a peaceful two-hour session. Ben Cohen, administrative aid, to whose presence some of the committee members have violently objected, was not present. Agreement was reached on several minor points, but the controversial "death sentence" provision was not discussed.

The House lobby investigating committee will resume hearings today. They will examine Hopson—if they can find him.

Relief Head Denies Georgia Charges

Whites, Negroes Reported Using Same Bowls.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, Aug. 7.—Requested by the Fulton (Atlanta) County Commisson to clear up charges that white people and Negroes were working in headquarters of the County Relief Administration "without regard to color," Miss Gay B. Shepperson, State administrator, today denied such a condition existed.

The allegations were made to the commission by Kenneth Murrell, representing the American Legion, and Charles W. Bernhardt, State commander of the United Spanish-American War Veterans.

Murrell charged both white people and Negroes were working in the same offices, drinking out of the same water fountains and using other facilities at headquarters "with no lines drawn as to race."

Bernhardt asserted two drinking fountains were installed at the headquarters recently, labeled "For White" and "For Negroes" and that they were "promptly erased."

The commission adopted a resolution requesting Miss Shepperson to correct the alleged condition.

Japan Decides Cartoon Incident Is 'Closed'

Tokyo, Aug. 7 (AP).—The newspaper Asahi said today that high officials of the foreign office have decided to consider the Vanity Fair incident closed "in view of the sincere sympathy in the attitude of the (American) State Department."

A foreign office spokesman was noncommittal. He said merely that he lacked full reports from Ambassador Hirosi Saito as to the measures taken at Washington in connection with "insults" to the Japanese imperial house in the August issue of the magazine.

Private Firms To Receive Part Of REA Fund

Executive Order Requires 25 Per Cent Be Spent for Labor.

President Roosevelt yesterday authorized the Rural Electrification Administration, a part of the $4,000,000,000 works program, to make loans to private utilities and co-operative organizations, as well as to States and municipalities.

In an executive order setting up rules and regulations for electrification, the President ordered that not less than 25 per cent of expenditures for such projects shall be paid for labor. Wages, under the order, will be set by the REA and will correspond to those effective in communities in which work is done. Morris L. Cooke, REA administrator, said that every effort will be made to draw 90 per cent of the workers from relief rolls.

The regulations promulgated by the President make no provision for grants. Thus all of the $100,000,000 in the possession of the REA will be available for loans. Loans may be made for the entire cost of projects, in contrast to the 45 per cent limit prescribed for the PWA.

"Although about 95 per cent of the electric utility industry in the United States is privately operated, there will not be a corresponding division beforehand of REA funds," an REA statement said. "There will be no arbitrary division whatever. Funds will be made available to public and private agencies in whatever proportions each group submits sound projects and submits them promptly. A preference will be accorded to the applications of public bodies and farm cooperatives."

The REA announced that it will make self-liquidating loans, normally for 20 years and normally at 3 per cent interest. The same terms are contemplated for all classes of borrowers.

Aldrich Quits Roper Council Of Trade Aids

Follows Many Others in Deserting Ranks of Trade Advisers.

By the Associated Press.

Reviving reports of differences between the New Deal and the Roper Business Advisory Council, the resignation of Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank, because of the pressure of other obligations, was disclosed yesterday.

His departure marked the sixth in recent weeks of the business leaders who were organized two years ago to advise the Administration on the business viewpoint.

While amicable reasons have been given publicly for the resignations, several council members have stated privately that they were dissatisfied with the council's effectiveness in advising the Administration. Other resignations were believed to be impending.

Roper Not Concerned.

At his press conference, when asked if there was a possibility of the council breaking up, Secretary Roper said "not the slightest."

The other recent resignations were those of:

Robert L. Lund, St. Louis, chairman, National Association of Manufacturers; James F. Bell, Minneapolis, president, General Mills, Inc.; Howard Heinz, Pittsburgh, president, H. J. Heinz Co.; Edward L. Ryerson, jr., Chicago, president, Joseph T. Ryerson & Son, Inc.; Harold C. Smith, Chicago, president, Illinois Tool Works.

Future Being Studied.

A special committee is working on a program for its future and is expected to consider the question of dissolution.

The resignations started shortly after the United States Chamber of Commerce convention last spring, when President Roosevelt cited the council as supporting in genreal his views, in contrast to the highly critical convention.

H. P. Kendall, Boston, president of the Kendall Co., is chairman of the council of 43 members.

Roosevelt to Win, Heflin Predicts

Talmadge and Long Both Wrong, Says Alabaman.

By the Associated Press.

Jacksonville, Fla., Aug. 7.—Re-election of President Roosevelt was predicted here today by J. Thomas Heflin, former United States Senator from Alabama.

Senator Huey P. Long and Gov. Eugene Talmadge, both New Deal foes, are "wrong about Roosevelt," Heflin said.

He said Talmadge, "in some respects," had made a good Governor and Long had "done well for Louisiana."

"But that doesn't matter," he added. "Georgia folks may be for Talmadge, but you will find that they are still for Roosevelt despite Talmadge."

Louisiana, he said, was not so certain. The State may "get out of line," Heflin added, but he hoped things would be different between now and next year.

Siamese Smother Army Revolt Plot

Ananda Still King After 3d Uprising in 2 Years.

By the Associated Press.

Bangkok, Siam, Aug. 7.—Soldiers patrolled the streets of Siam's capital tonight after a widespread plot to overthrow the government technically headed by little 11-year-old King Ananda was smashed.

This subversive movement, the third in less than two years, began among noncommissioned officers of the regular army. Officials said the plotters planned to seize and kill their superior officers and, once in control of the nation's armed forces, to take over the government.

Prompt and vigorous action by loyalists apparently ended the movement before it got well started. The number of revolutionaries arrested was not disclosed. A special court was appointed to try them.

Young King Ananda is continuing his studies in Lausanne, Switzerland. He was proclaimed King last March four days after his uncle, King Projadhipok, abdicated. Siam is now ruled by a regency council.

Motor Official Bares Proffer Of Army 'Deal'

SilvermanAsked $750,000 on $10,000,000 Order, House Unit Told.

By the Associated Press.

The House Military Committee yesterday heard evidence that Joseph Silverman, jr., fostered a plan to divide a big War Department contract among leading automobile manufacturers.

From Norman X. Haig, of Detroit, in charge of General Motors Corporation sales to the Government, and again from J. B. Woodside, Washington representative of the corporation, the committee heard more details of the plan, which Haig outlined this way:

"We were to bid on a dealers' discount, plus his (Silverman's) commission, and he would split the business between Ford, Chrysler and Chevrolet, or just Chrysler and Chevrolet."

Silverman, Haig said, wanted a 7½ per cent, or $750,000 commission, for swinging the $10,000,000 order back in late 1933 and early 1934.

Woodside said he had heard of the proposed deal through Haig and Frank Speicher, New York inner-tube dealer. Speicher already has given the committee a similar story, but Silverman told the members flatly, several weeks ago, there had been no such plan.

Silverman, son of a Russian immigrant, built up a business in excess Army supplies, but since has been barred from the War Department. A grand jury investigated Silverman's transactions with the department, but did not return an indictment.

The Military Committee now is continuing that line of inquiry at direction of the House.

Haig said M. E. Coyle, Chevrolet president, declined to have anything to do with Silverman's plan. Haig himself said he thought there was something "funny" about it.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), South Carolina, promptly arranged to ask Coyle to appear before the committee, perhaps next week, to tell what he knew of the scheme and why he turned it down.

A. F. L. Offers To Aid 'Racket' Inquiry in N. Y.

Woll Heads Group Named by Green to Cooperate With Dewey.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 7.—Full co-operation of the American Federation of Labor in the New York City investigation of labor racketeering was pledged today by the federation's executive council.

"The position of the American Federation of Labor toward racketeers is well known," William Green, president, said after the council named a special committee to co-operate with Thomas E. Dewey, New York's special prosecutor.

The committee includes Matthew Woll, vice president of the lithographers' union; Joseph N. Weber, president of the musicians, and David Dubinsky, president of the ladies' garment workers. Green said they might confer with Dewey later this week.

To Speed Guffey Bill.

Orders to the federation's Washington lobby to redouble its efforts to enlist congressional support for the Guffey coal stabilization bill would go out by telephone later tonight, Green said.

J. W. Williams, president of the federation's building trades department, said he intended to take no action on the protest of building unions against the "security wage" of $93.50 a month.

William Hutcheson, president of the Carpenters Union, second largest in the Federation, said, however, that if his members worked for the "security wage," he wouldn't "O.K. it."

"I hope they have nerve enough to strike," he said. "Gen. Johnson was down here Monday and I politely told him that if my men agreed to work for that wage, I wouldn't O. Y. it."

Porters' Union Approved.

Other council business today:

Arranged for an investigation of a complaint by the Coopers Union that the carpenters had taken in workers in the Northwest that should belong to the coopers, and that carpenters had built a brewery tank in St. Joseph, Mo., that should have been built by the coopers.

Approved the application of the Sleeping Car Porters Union for a charter, but arranged for a conference between officials of that union and the sleeping car conductors to straighten out a dispute.

Received an application from George Brown, of the Stage Hands Union, to take in ushers, ticket-takers, box-office employes, wardrobe helpers and other employes in the theater. Deferred action.

Johnson Tells Strikers They May Lose Relief

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 7.—A strike of nearly 200 relief workers virtually tied up the Astor low-cost housing project today and brought from Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, works project administrator for this area, an ultimatum that the strikers will be dropped from the rolls unless they return by Friday.

The walkout followed a series of protests by labor unions against the $93.50 monthly maximum paid to skilled labor on WPA projects under the Government's "security wage" plan.

Gen. Johnson said he ordered all work stopped on the project shortly after noon and gave instructions that "a number of men milling around in the streets" be notified that unless they returned to work by Friday they would be dropped.

Chairman Langdon W. Post of the New York City Housing Authority expressed sympathy with the labor unions' efforts to maintain the prevailing rate of wage but said he did not "share the fear of organized labor that the present relief wage, which is definitely stated to be a relief wage, can be used by private employers or contractors to break down the regular wage rate."

Stalin Aids Filene, Sick in Moscow

Dictator Orders Medical Facilities for U.S. Man.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Aug. 7.—Joseph Stalin, Soviet dictator, ordered all medical facilities of the Kremlin placed at the disposal tonight of Edward A. Filene, 75-year-old Boston merchant and philanthropist seriously ill of lobar pneumonia at a hotel here. The American's condition was somewhat improved tonight after a slight relapse at noon.

Two Kremlin doctors and two Kremlin hospital nurses are attending him at the hotel, together with the medical director of the government travel agency and Dr. Rumreich, American Embassy physician.

The Foreign Office wired the Soviet consulate in Berlin to grant an immediate visa to the German heart and lung specialist, Prof. Fritz Meyer, so he could come here tomorrow by airplane.

William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador, again visited the patient. Mrs. John Wiley, wife of the embassy counselor, spent the afternoon at the bedside.

Filene was in good spirits and minimized the seriousness of his ailment. He said he was going to Carlsbad as soon as he was over his illness.

State Defers Action In Mutilation Case

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP).—The State today decided to defer further grand jury action against Mandeville W. Zenge, rawboned Missouri carpenter, accused of murdering Dr. Walter J. Bauer by mutilation, until tomorrow or Friday.

Charles S. Dougherty, assistant State's attorney, announced a conference of prosecutors would be held later to decide when to resume the presentation of evidence.

Swanson Acts To End Strikes At Ship Plants

Contract Clause Providing Arbitration Designed to Speed 13 Vessels.

By the Associated Press.

Aiming toward the goal of a treaty fleet, the Navy high command last night determined to speed the award of contracts for 13 warships on which bids were opened yesterday.

Simultaneous with this decision to hold daily conferences to push the awards, Secretary Swanson launched an effort to end labor troubles at the yards of its largest builder, and provide the Navy with a weapon for future emergencies.

Written into the contract specifications was a provision that if construction was delayed by strikes the Navy could appoint an arbitration board whose decision must be followed by the company to prevent cancellation of its contract.

Such a threat was voiced yesterday against the New York Shipbuilding Corporation, at whose Camden, N. J., yards $50,000,000 of Navy construction—three cruisers and four destroyers—has been held up for weeks by a strike.

Although President Roosevelt said at his press conference he expected the company to reply immediately to Tuesday's letter demanding to know whether it would submit to arbitration, Henry L. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, said later the time for a reply would not be up until noon today.

What would be done if the company refused to agree with the letter did not say, but it was said that either Philadelphia Navy Yard workmen could be sent to finish the warships or those nearly finished could be removed to another yard.

Significance was attached to the failure of the New York company to bid. Reminding that the Navy reserved the right to reject low bids, officials said privately that with seven vessels already held up there would have been little chance of the award being made to that concern.

Explaining that almost all the bidders took "exception" to the requirement for compulsory arbitration, officials said it was most unlikely that they would receive contracts if they did not withdraw these protests.

The Newport Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., of Newport News, Va., was the low bidder on the two major items of the day's bidding, offering to build a new aircraft carrier for $24,434,000 and a light cruiser for $15,525,000.

The other vesels were three 1,850-ton destroyers, five 1,500-ton destroyers and three submarines.

Together with the remaining 11 vessels in this year's 24-ship program—another light cruiser, seven 1,500-ton destroyers and three submarines—the bids yesterday left only 36 destroyers and 18 submarines to carry out the treaty strength program.

2 Hurt as Boiler Falls From Rigging

Colored Worker Crushed in G St. Accident.

Two workmen, employes of a local hauling company, were injured seriously yesterday when a heavy boiler they were lowering into a basement in the 1400 block of G street northwest, slipped and pinned them beneath.

John Vanhorn, colored, 42, 2448 Snows court northwest, suffered hurts which may cost his life. He was working in the sidewalk opening which led to the basement. The boiler slid from a tripod rigging and crushed him under its weight.

Thomas Brooks, colored, 26, 2431 I street northwest, the second workman, was struck and knocked down when the boiler fell. Both were extricated by police and members of the fire rescue squad. They were taken to Emergency Hospital. Vanhorn received head injuries, lacerations and possible internal injuries. Brooks suffered a fractured right foot and lacerations. The men were employed by Littlefield & Alvord Co.

Girl Strikers Disrobe Others In Street Riot

Disorders Renewed in Dallas as Factory Workers Stage Wild Scenes.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, Tex., Aug. 7.—Striking women garment workers stripped four women naked, partly disrobed six others and chased them through the streets spanking and scratching them in wild rioting today.

Six persons, including four policemen, were injured. The outbreak marked a renewal of disorders in a 6-month-old walkout.

Twenty-seven women and three men were arrested. The women were released on bonds of $200 each. One of the men was freed under $600 bond. Police said the two others probably would be charged with inciting to riot. The men were identified as relatives of the strikers.

Warned to Be Ladies.

In releasing the 27 arrested women Police Chief Robert L. Jones told them:

"You can carry on your strike and we won't bother you, but when you cease to be ladies we will arrest you."

The women smiled. They promised to cause no further disturbance.

However, John Radkin, manager of the local union, declared the strike would be "continued in one form or another for the next six months, if that is necessary."

The strikers are demanding higher wages, shorter hours and union recognition.

Two of the women whose clothes were torn were not connected with the strike or a dress plant in any way. The eight others were employes of the Lorch Manufacturing Co., in front of which most of the rioting took place. Other workers were attacked near the Morten-Davis Co. two blocks away.

Had No Warning.

"I had just gotten off a street car to transfer," said Miss Valera McCormick, one of the victims, not an employe of the dress plant. "Before I knew it, they grabbed me and tore my clothes to pieces. They threw them in the street, and I had to run three-quarters of a block before I reached the Lorch plant."

The company gave her a dress and she went on to her place of business.

Feud Climax Puts Man in Hospital

Police Seek Assailant After Street Stabbing.

To police it was just another round in the Anastasi-Fillaramo feud.

To Dominic Anastasi, 100 block of D street northwest, it was a trip to the hospital. To Thomas Fillaramo, also of the 100 block of D street northwest, it was something else—and police of the First Precinct want to know just what. To residents of the neighborhood it was a morning of excitement.

According to information given police, Anastasi and Fillaramo, neighbors, engaged in a fight on the street. Anastasi was stabbed in the shoulder and head. He was treated at Casualty Hospital. He told investigators Fillaramo was his assailant. Fillaramo disappeared and a lookout was broadcast for him.

Neighbors and police said the feud was one of long-standing. Once before, it was reported, they met in combat and both went to the hospital. This time it will be settled in Police Court—if police have their way.

N. Y. Strike Threatened By Movie Operators

New York, Aug. 7 (AP).—Fear of a widespread movie operators' strike soared along Broadway tonight after 1,500 members of Operators Union 306 unanimously voted against accepting a 41 per cent wage cut threatened by large chain exhibitors.

The wage cut, scheduled to take effect Monday, is from $2.12½ per hour to $1.25.

Brest Strikers Attack Police In New Riots

800 Passengers Marooned as American-Bound Ship Is Tied Up.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 7.—Throngs of shipyard workers again fought Brest police tonight in continued protests against governmental pay cuts.

Several were injured slightly as troops and gendarmes charged the strikers 20 times before chasing off the trouble-makers, who defied a ban on street gatherings, stoned guards and attempted to build barricades.

The disorder followed a new walkout in the Brest naval shipyards and a strike of the crew of the French liner Champlain that marooned 800 America-bound passengers in Havre.

The Champlain may be able to depart tomorrow afternoon, however. About half of the strikers voted tonight to call off their walkout in response to the government reducing their 10 per cent pay cut to 3 per cent on smaller salaries.

Closed Three Days.

The Brest walkout closed the shipyards for the third successive day to emphasize the refusal of the workers to accept the 10 per cent pay cuts authorized in the emergency government decrees. They were rallied by their leaders to manifest at the bier of their comrade, slain in the rioting of the two previous days, which also caused injury to 50.

Shortly before the latest strike, employes of the naval arsenal returned to their jobs under guard of police and soldiers. Tonight a curfew closed cafes at 10 o'clock and banned street gatherings.

While sailors of the French Line met at Le Havre to draft a new demand on their employers, who refused to put the strikers to work at a 5 per cent reduction because it would violate a government order, the 800 persons who expected to be at sea in the Champlain fretted in hotels as guests of the French Line.

Checks Refused.

The Champlain engineers tied up the ship when they refused checks minus the government-ordered 10 per cent cut. The sailors of the Normandie and three other French ships joined the Champlain crew in a peaceful demonstration.

Officials of the French Line, government subsidized, promised the Champlain would sail, however late. If it cannot get away, arrangements will be made to accommodate the stranded passengers on other vessels.

A heavy guard of gendarmes, soldiers and sailors was maintained at the Brest Arsenal, where 3,000 men returned to work after a riotous demonstration yesterday.

Toronto, Aug. 7 (AP).—Canadian shipping on the Great Lakes will be tied up Friday noon if the call for a general strike issued by the National Seamen's Association goes into effect.

Major shipping companies said they have received a notification from Capt. H. N. McMaster, president of the National Seamen's Association, to the effect the strike had been called.

They declared they could not meet a demand for increased wages and would be forced to discontinue operations in the even of a strike.

Movie Operators Quit, Audiences Sent Home

By the United Press.

Paris, Aug. 7.—Audiences in movie theaters throughout the Champs Elysees amusement quarter were evacuated tonight when projection operators went on strike in protest against the government's economic decrees reducing wages.

Society of Composers Enjoined by State Court

Olympic, Wash., Aug. 7 (AP).—Superior Judge D. F. Wright enjoined the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers today from entering into additional agreements in this State, asserting that it had built up a monopoly on "hotcha-syncopation" and fixed prices. Attorney General G. W. Hamilton brought the suit.

All existing agreements were ordered placed in status quo until the society, which has a membership of 900, shows it is complying with the law. The court found that the society had pooled copyrights to the most popular compositions of each member, forcing contracts on theaters and radio stations. Six radio stations and ten broadcasting companies were parties to the action.

Things as They Are

New Government Regulation Stops Things as Country Needs Starting, Says Writer.

By Samuel Crowther.

There is a strong likelihood that, in the debate over changing the Constitution, the real issue may be lost. The slogan "Save the Constitution" is not a happy one and plays into the hands of those who would amend the Constitution or even destroy it as a bar to social changes which are whimsically termed social reforms. Even now a kind of subsidiary debate is on as to whether or not adequate amendments can be drawn.

The Constitution is not, to most of us, a sacred instrument, but only a very wise one that has set up a form of government which has worked to afford an even justice to a larger number of people than has any other form of government. The Constitution does not guarantee an abundant life to the lazy and shiftless; it does not grant to the least capable members of society—that is, the so-called proletariat—the exclusive right to rule the more capable members. No collectivivist form of society is possible under our Constitution, for the excellent reason that the makers were wholly familiar with all the collectivist theories—now presented in new coats as new—and definitely rejected.

If the Constitution is now standing in the way of a better social order, then by all means it should be amended or scrapped. But before we do that we should at least know what the proposed new social order is and how it may reasonably be expected to affect each of us. Not otherwise can we know whether the new order represents progress or retrogression. The country is through with blank check legislation.

The President has raised the issue that the Constitution is out of date and ought to be amended. His argument as to the age of the Constitution is not impressive. As compared to the Ten Commandments and the Golden Rule it is very youthful and although Congress has been asked to tamper with both the Commandments and the Golden Rule, it has not been formally requested to repudiate them.

The real point in the mind of the President is that the Constitution interferes with his powers and that if he had more power he could and would do something in a big way for the country.

The President's point may be well taken. But we need to know very definitely what plans for the social welfare are being blocked by the Constitution. For then we can, as a people, determine whether or not the plans are actually of benefit or only labeled as of benefit. If writing an inclusively hopeful preamble to an act were the same as effecting the purposes outlined, we should long since have attained the perfect state and have no present worries.

But the President has announced no such program. The New Deal remains inchoate and incoherent. Even those who say they are for it cannot agree on what it is. The President has not to date been hampered by the Supreme Court. The NRA had already demonstrated that it was not a measure of social justice long before the Supreme Court knocked it out. Those who were employed in its administration made dismal prophecies as to what would happen to the country without the beneficent care of the NRA. But events have shown that they confused their personal welfare with the public welfare, and the country as a whole was deeply relieved to be rid of thousands of petty and most officious officials.

The Labor Board set up under the NRA caused a deal of gratuitous trouble and managed to make itself disliked by both wage earners and employers. The Wagner labor bill is mainly a restatement of the thoroughly discredited labor section of the NRA and gives no promise of being able to do anything more noteworthy than the trial horse which preceded it. If the Supreme Court in due season declares it unconstitutional—as seems likely—the country will not be deprived of anything except what it has already tried and found wanting. It seems certain that by the time the AAA reaches the Supreme Court it will be about as dead as was the NRA.

A favorable decision would not have revived the NRA. It was founded on a series of immature conceptions and simply had to fail. All the other measures founded on the same variety of economic delusions will have to fail and adverse decisions by the Supreme Court will serve only to end the agony. It ought to be evident to everyone by now that, although regulations can stop something, they can never start anything. The country has had plenty of stopping. It needs some starting.

It is not the way of candor to pretend that hastily sketched measures mostly modelled after plans that have been tried and have failed in Europe, will work here if only the Supreme Court will allow them a trial. Yet that is exactly the position which the slogan, "Save the Constitution," connotes. The issue is not the Constitution, but the validity of the measures proposed which are in conflict with it.

Somehow I am reminded of Handy Andy when his master confronted him with the two odd shoes he had laid out. Andy scratched his head, looked puzzled and announced that, strangely enough, two other shoes below stairs were in the same predicament.

tory," but made no reference to Mackall's resignation. Acceptance of the resignation was announced from Hopkins' office several hours after the conference.

The Senators said that the Federal Government had allotted $49,000,000 to Maryland, of which $15,000,000 already had been earmarked for construction at various Army posts, on State highways, CCC camps and other Federal activities.

"Of the $34,000,000 remaining," the announcement said, "Baltimore City is to receive $22,000,000 and the counties $12,000,000 from the Federal Government. To the $22,000,000 allotted to Baltimore City is to be added $11,000,000 which Mayor Jackson says he now has available, making $33,000,000 for Baltimore, to be expended upon a program including school construction, Howard street extension, Lochraven tunnel, sewerage and waste improvements, garbage disposal and other similar projects which have been under consideration for some time in the City of Baltimore."

It was stated that plans and specifications already have been prepared for the most of these projects and that they can get under way with little delay.

"The $12,000,000 allotted to the counties," the announcement said, "will likewise be augmented by required donations to this fund from these political subdivisions of the State. Altogether, the Maryland public works program of national, city and county appropriations will approximate $62,000,000."

Part of the Baltimore projects, it was stated, will be constructed by the PWA and part by the Works Progress Administration. Maj. Jackson is expected to confer with officials of both organizations this afternoon to determine which projects will be constructed by PWA and which by WPA. It was stated that employes on relief rolls "will be funneled through one agency for both these governmental departments.

"It was the thought of the parties attending today's conference that the plan as outlined would accomplish the following:

"First: The employment of all persons able to work now on the relief roll on one or another of these projects some time in November.

"Second: That it would furnish employment to those people for at least a year, and

"Third: That when the program is completed, there would be to show for the money expended permanent and necessary improvements for the city and State which would likely have been done anyhow by the political units concerned whenever finances and circumstances permitted their construction."

$100,000 Blaze Sweeps Navy's Newest Cruiser

Officials Order Probe of Mysterious Fire on U. S. S. Quincy.

By the Associated Press.

Quincy, Mass., Aug. 7.—Fire swept the newest United States cruiser today, and the 10,000-ton Quincy was left crippled at her dock.

While officials of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, builders, and Navy officials sought to explain the cause of the blaze, they unofficially estimated the loss might reach $100,000.

The blaze was confined largely to the expensive master switchboard in the engine room and to the main cables and other wiring which lead from it.

Naval officials said no current was being generated in the ship, and it was undetermined how the insulation around cable work, which was nearing completion, could have become ignited.

Watchman on Duty.

A watchman was on duty and the ship was brilliantly illuminated from stem to stern. These lights, supplied by a shore current, remained on during the fire.

The blaze was discovered shortly after midnight, but not until nearly three hours later was the Quincy City Fire Department called to the yard. Yard officials tried in vain to stem the course of the fire, which swept the aft end of the big engine room and then spread to the adjoining generator room.

There has been some unrest here recently among workers of the Bethlehem plant, although they declined to join the strike now in progress at the company's Camden, N. J. plant.

Delivery Delay Seen.

Rear Admiral Paul B. Dungan, senior naval officer at the plant, declared that the Quincy, which cost $8,196,000, probably would not be ready for delivery to the Government next January, as had been planned.

The Quincy was launched here on June 19 at a brilliant ceremony. The sleek fighting ship was named in honor of the birthplace of Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy and descendant of two Presidents, and was christened by his daughter, Mrs. Catherine Adams Morgan, daughter-in-law of J. P. Morgan, the financier.

Army Deserter Forces Boy, 13, To Aid Crimes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 7.—Forced to steal rides on freight trains and participate in at least two crimes in a week's ime, William Sharp, 13-year-old York, Pa., schoolboy, was on his way home tonight after police here freed him from Harry Barr admitted to be a U. S. Army deserter.

Barr and the boy were picked up by Chief of Police Oscar Ambrose here last night after Barr's attempted criminal assault upon a young girl. He is being held on a charge of kidnaping and criminal assault.

Today the boy told police that he was forced by Barr to accompany him from his home town and showed abrasions where he said he had been beaten.

In Washington, young Sharp said, his kidnaper had struck a railway detective on the head. They left him unconscious. Questioned by police, Barr admitted the incident, but insisted that it had occurred in Jacksonville, Fla., Authorities in both towns were being checked tonight. Barr also told police that he had served a term in St. Mary Industrial Home in Baltimore.

be its one-man police department with enforcement of parking regulations "without fear or favor" his chief duty—Judge Smith dismissed parking charges against G. LaMar Kelly, councilman, and Frank H. Karn, president of the Montgomery County board of commissioners.

In the case of Kelly, Judge Smith declined to accept forfeiture of $3.50 which Kelly had posted and which he said he felt "obliged and willing" to pay.

Judge Backed Idea.

Kelly was one of the angriest at last night's session. He recalled that Judge Smith had been in attendance at the council meeting that approved the appointment of Thompson and his without-fear-or-favor instructions. He recalled also, he said, that Judge Smith at that time expressed himself as being 100 per cent for the idea.

F. Bache Abert, the council clerk, read a petition, presented by Judge Smith in council in 1933, when the present parking restrictions were adopted asking that the ordinance be changed to permit parking in front of the building in which the judge has his office.

Firemen Rescue Family in Flooded Ohio Town

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Firemen were called on to rescue marooned families yesterday in Massillon, Ohio, when central part of State suffered from flooded rivers.

Floods Strike Three States, Heat Broken

Panhandle, around Wheeling, were estimated at $250,000.

A family of three was saved by a quick-witted rescuer when their car was rolled over by Middle Wheeling Creek as it overflowed its banks. Frank Miller dived under water and opened a door to release Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jefferson and their baby.

In Ohio, the worst floods since 1913, when 730 were killed and $180,000,000 in damage was caused, rolled into the east central part of the State, damaging crops, forcing hundreds of families to leave their homes and causing two deaths. Further rainfall was predicted as the Tuscarawas and Muskingum rivers reached peak stages. Nicholas Begovic, farmer, was swept from the roof of his stalled auto on a State highway near Coshocton and drowned before the eyes of his wife and daughter. Steve Uzonoff, 7, was drowned in Ritters Run, Miss Marjorie McIntosh, 73, missing, was believed drowned in flooded Hollow Rock Run at Irondale. Oron Wilcox was killed by lightning at Wellington. Mrs. Harry Bartrum died of a heart attack when lightning struck a nearby barn at Cygnet.

Hundreds Homeless.

Three hundred families fled from flood waters in Coshocton County.

Between 70 and 100 families at Masilon were rescued by police and firemen in boats. Railway tracks were washed out in scattered areas and highway travel was paralyzed in many districts.

New Rain Record.

James Watson, 16, was drowned at Clarksburg when he tried to swim the West Ford River. Twenty business houses were flooded at Salem and 20 families were forced to leave their homes at Salem and Bristol. Nearly all highways are impassable near Glenville, Salem, Bristol, Ellenboro, Harrisville and Burnsville. Federal highway 19 between Jane Lew and Weston is submerged and the Federal route between Clarksburg and Weston is closed. The Little Kanawha at Glenville rose a foot an hour, threatening the town. The flood brought 8.25 inches of rainfall in the State in six days, a new all-time record.

In Wisconsin—The crest of the swollen Kickapoo passed Soldiers Grove, a village of 500, leaving it surrounded by water and causing damage estimated at $500,000.

In the Middle West—A brief respite of cool breezes and showers ended and a heat wave set in, which began immediately to add to the Nation's heat toll of 150 for the summer. Carl Stewart, 19, son of the sheriff of McCurtain County, Okla., died at Idabel.

Mercury at 110.

Highest marks of the season were reported in many communities, including Wellington, Kans., 110; Arkansas City, Kans., 109; Bartlesville, Okla., 108, and Wichita, Kans., 107. From 25 to 50 per cent of the corn crop in eastern and central Kansas has been damaged, the Weather Bureau reported. The temperature at Kansas City was 100, and St. Louis reported 90 or more for the fifteenth consecutive day. The mercury was at from 95 to 100 throughout Iowa. In Nebraska, Lincoln had 99 yesterday, compared to 97 Tuesday. Carbondale, Ill., reported 104; Dallas, Tex., 95. Minnesota readings hovered around 90, with warmer weather forecast.

In the Philippine Islands, floods of last week had killed 110 within the town of Dagupan, Pangasinan Province, according to reports. Further reports, from correspondents of the Manila Daily Bulletin said 126 were dead or missing in three provinces. Damage was estimated at $1,500,000.

Town officials at Binnaley reported 50 were drowned and 52 others had perished in the capsizing of two fishing boats in the nearby Aboleleg River. Four were known dead and three missing in flooded Sur Province. Nine were reported dead in Bulacan Province.

Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy declared a state of emergency in several towns to stop profiteering, and health officials were busy preventing epidemics. Red Cross and other organizations strove to organize relief.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Aug. 7.—One hundred and twenty-six persons were reported dead or missing tonight in floods that ravaged three provinces north of Manila last week.

Dispatches received over restored communication lines said 110 were dead or missing in or near the town of Dagupan, Province of Pangasinan.

With damage exceeding $1,500,000, district engineers said all reports indicated the disaster approached that wrought by last year's typhoons which swept the central Philippines, killing more than 400.

Other reports of the recent storm included one that 50 persons were drowned in Binmaley, near Dagupan. The capsizing of two fishing boats in the Aboleg River, also near Dagupan, was said to have caused 52 other deaths.

Many villages of central and northern Luzon Island were flooded, unconfirmed reports said.

$2,550,000 Is Voted To Cool the Capitol

The House wasn't fooled yesterday by Washington's agreeable drop in temperature or by the vague promise of a short session next year.

Anticipating other sultry summers in the Capital, House members adopted a Senate amendment to the second deficiency appropriations bill providing $2,550,000 for air conditioning the entire Capitol and office buildings.

The House also adopted the Senate amendment appropriating $800,000 for the purchase of additional playground and recreational sites by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Included in the conference report adopted by the House was another $1,200,000 for District items, including $45,000 for the Health Department.

The measure now goes to the White House for the President's signature as the conference report was adopted by the Senate on Monday. A total of approximately $300,000,000 is carried in the bill.

Tugwell Asks Fair Judgment For Land Plans

Don't Disapprove Because 'We Are Dangerous,' He Urges Farmers.

By the Associated Press.

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, today asked that the Administration's land conservation and agricultural readjustment program be not disapproved "on the ground that we are dangerous fellows."

In an address at the Tompkins County development meeting, Tugwell, who also is rural resettlement administrator, spoke of the necessity for the Federal Government to handle the problem of putting land to better uses.

"This implies, therefore, that we must continuously consult the individuals, whose interests we are charged with the duty of promoting, as to their ambitions. We can do nothing which smells of the armchair, of the bureaucraft or of the student's lamp.

"We must enlist the best brains, the ablest administrators and the most vigorous executives who can be drafted into public service, but we must place them at the service of the public or we are frivolous and meddlesome. We must, above all, be judged not by what we say but by what we do.

"American politics are paved with good intentions. I do not ask you to approve this program on the ground that we who are doing it mean well or that our hearts are in the right place. At the same time, I ask you not to disapprove the program on the ground that we are dangerous fellows. This undertaking must be judged entirely by itself, by what it accomplishes and by what it is, not by what anybody hopes or fears it may accomplish."

Traffic on Route 1 Excessive, Board Holds.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 7.—Giving the consideration of public safety as its reason, the State corporation commission today denied the application of a motor bus line to operate between Washington and Alexandria on U. S. Route 1.

The company, Monumental Lines, Inc., was the first applicant to be denied the right to operate interstate passenger bus service in Virginia.

In the opinion of the Commonwealth, written by Commissioner H. Lester Hooker, traffic over the Washington-Alexandria road is now "excessive," and therefore the granting of the certificate "would unduly endanger the life and property of the general public traveling over this route."

The City of Alexandria, the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, the board of supervisors of Arlington County, and the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Co. opposed the petition, which was heard by the commission on April 26.

Nice Approves Paroles for 17

Harold Cox, of Montgomery, Among Those Freed.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 7.—Gov. Harry W. Nice today approved 17 applications for parole in cases that had been recommended by the State parole commissioner. He also reduced the sentence in another case.

Paroles granted included Harold A. Cox, convicted January 18 in Montgomery County of housebreaking and sentenced to a year in the House of Correction; William Love, Negro, convicted in 1930 in Prince Georges County of arson and sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary, and William P. Rush, Negro, convicted April 13 in St. Marys County of larceny and sentenced to six months in the House of Correction.

The sentence reduced was that of Arthur Herring, convicted in 1930 in Baltimore in six cases of robbery with deadly weapons, and sentenced to 20 years in the penitentiary. The sentence was reduced to eight years.

Judge Suspends Terms For Illegal Operation

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 7 (AP).—Judge Don Halsey, of Corporation Court, yesterday suspended three-year prison sentences imposed upon Dr. J. A. Pollard, West Lynchburg physician, and Mrs. Lillian Thornton, nurse, after they had been convicted by a jury of performing an illegal operation.

The judge said his action was supported by a petition signed by all twelve jurors, asking the terms be suspended.

Fairfax Board Assails State Highway Group

Resolution Asserts Blame Shifted in Regard to Secondary Roads.

The State Highway Commission of Virginia was severely criticized yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County for its tactics in allegedly issuing "misleading information" to the citizens of the county in regard to secondary roads.

The resolution adopted by unanimous action of the board stated that the board has been constantly criticized by groups appearing before it because of the inadequate maintenance of various roads in the secondary system. These groups stated they have been advised that if the board would recommend improvement of the particular road in which the group was interested, it would be given favorable consideration by the commission. It is alleged that this misled the people of the county to believe that the failure to properly maintain the roads in the secondary system is due to a lack of interest by the board and its unwillingness to request road improvement.

The resolution concludes by declaring "that this board now enters its earnest protest against the continuation by the State Highway Commission and its officers and employes of the writing of such letters to parties complaining about the road situation in this county, and thereby leading such parties to believe that the failure to have their requests granted is due to the action of this board, and that it earnestly requests the State Highway Department, in response to complaints received by it in respect to the secondary system of highways, to advise such parties that it has exclusive jurisdiction and control over the construction, betterment and maintenance of such highways, and, if it be so advised, that its inability to properly maintain the same is due to lack of sufficient funds."

State Highway Unit Plans Expansion

By the Associated Press.

Richmond Va., Aug. 7.—The State highway department will be expanded in both its office force and its field personnel to handle the new Federal work relief road program, Commissioner H. G. Shirley said today.

Shirley said no plans for expansion had been worked out in detail, but the department undoubtedly would have to rent additional quarters and hire more draftsmen and bookkeepers as soon as the $13,500,000 program is approved by Federal authorities. The greater part of the expansion will come in the field, he said, as additional men will be added to the forces of the eight construction districts.

"Our greatest problem will be to find skilled workmen," he added. "We are going to need a number of steel workers, machinists and other workers in the steel trades."

$100,000 Blaze Sweeps Navy's Newest Cruiser

Officials Order Probe of Mysterious Fire on U. S. S. Quincy.

By the Associated Press.

Quincy, Mass., Aug. 7.—Fire swept the newest United States cruiser today, and the 10,000-ton Quincy was left crippled at her dock.

While officials of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, builders, and Navy officials sought to explain the cause of the blaze, they unofficially estimated the loss might reach $100,000.

The blaze was confined largely to the expensive master switchboard in the engine room and to the main cables and other wiring which lead from it.

Naval officials said no current was being generated in the ship, and it was undetermined how the insulation around cable work, which was nearing completion, could have become ignited.

Watchman on Duty.

A watchman was on duty and the ship was brilliantly illuminated from stem to stern. These lights, supplied by a shore current, remained on during the fire.

The blaze was discovered shortly after midnight, but not until nearly three hours later was the Quincy City Fire Department called to the yard. Yard officials tried in vain to stem the course of the fire, which swept the aft end of the big engine room and then spread to the adjoining generator room.

There has been some unrest here recently among workers of the Bethlehem plant, although they declined to join the strike now in progress at the company's Camden, N. J. plant.

Delivery Delay Seen.

Rear Admiral Paul B. Dungan, senior naval officer at the plant, declared that the Quincy, which cost $8,196,000, probably would not be ready for delivery to the Government next January, as had been planned.

The Quincy was launched here on June 19 at a brilliant ceremony. The sleek fighting ship was named in honor of the birthplace of Charles Francis Adams, former Secretary of the Navy and descendant of two Presidents, and was christened by his daughter, Mrs. Catherine Adams Morgan, daughter-in-law of J. P. Morgan, the financier.

Army Deserter Forces Boy, 13, To Aid Crimes

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Greencastle, Pa., Aug. 7.—Forced to steal rides on freight trains and participate in at least two crimes in a week's ime, William Sharp, 13-year-old York, Pa., schoolboy, was on his way home tonight after police here freed him from Harry Barr admitted to be a U. S. Army deserter.

Barr and the boy were picked up by Chief of Police Oscar Ambrose here last night after Barr's attempted criminal assault upon a young girl. He is being held on a charge of kidnaping and criminal assault.

Today the boy told police that he was forced by Barr to accompany him from his home town and showed abrasions where he said he had been beaten.

In Washington, young Sharp said, his kidnaper had struck a railway detective on the head. They left him unconscious. Questioned by police, Barr admitted the incident, but insisted that it had occurred in Jacksonville, Fla., Authorities in both towns were being checked tonight. Barr also told police that he had served a term in St. Mary Industrial Home in Baltimore.

be its one-man police department with enforcement of parking regulations "without fear or favor" his chief duty—Judge Smith dismissed parking charges against G. LaMar Kelly, councilman, and Frank H. Karn, president of the Montgomery County board of commissioners.

In the case of Kelly, Judge Smith declined to accept forfeiture of $3.50 which Kelly had posted and which he said he felt "obliged and willing" to pay.

Judge Backed Idea.

Kelly was one of the angriest at last night's session. He recalled that Judge Smith had been in attendance at the council meeting that approved the appointment of Thompson and his without-fear-or-favor instructions. He recalled also, he said, that Judge Smith at that time expressed himself as being 100 per cent for the idea.

F. Bache Abert, the council clerk, read a petition, presented by Judge Smith in council in 1933, when the present parking restrictions were adopted asking that the ordinance be changed to permit parking in front of the building in which the Judge has his office.

Firemen Rescue Family in Flooded Ohio Town

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Firemen were called on to rescue marooned families yesterday in Massillon, Ohio, when central part of State suffered from flooded rivers.

Floods Strike Three States, Heat Broken

Panhandle, around Wheeling, were estimated at $250,000.

A family of three was saved by a quick-witted rescuer when their car was rolled over by Middle Wheeling Creek as it overflowed its banks. Frank Miller dived under water and opened a door to release Mr. and Mrs. Albert Jefferson and their baby.

In Ohio, the worst floods since 1913, when 730 were killed and $180,000,000 in damage was caused, rolled into the east central part of the State, damaging crops, forcing hundreds of families to leave their homes and causing two deaths. Further rainfall was predicted as the Tuscarawas and Muskingum rivers reached peak stages. Nicholas Begovic, farmer, was swept from the roof of his stalled auto on a State highway near Coshocton and drowned before the eyes of his wife and daughter. Steve Uzonoff, 7, was drowned in Ritters Run, Miss Marjorie McIntosh, 73, missing, was believed drowned in flooded Hollow Rock Run at Irondale. Oron Wilcox was killed by lightning at Wellington. Mrs. Harry Bartrum died of a heart attack when lightning struck a nearby barn at Cygnet.

Hundreds Homeless.

Three hundred families fled from flood waters in Coshocton County.

Between 70 and 100 families at Masillon were rescued by police and firemen in boats. Railway tracks were washed out in scattered areas and highway travel was paralyzed in many districts.

New Rain Record.

James Watson, 16, was drowned at Clarksburg when he tried to swim the West Ford River. Twenty business houses were flooded at Salem and 20 families were forced to leave their homes at Salem and Bristol. Nearly all highways are impassable near Glenville, Salem, Bristol, Ellenboro, Harrisville and Burnsville. Federal highway 19 between Jane Lew and Weston is submerged and the Federal route between Clarksburg and Weston is closed. The Little Kanawha at Glenville rose a foot an hour, threatening the town. The flood brought 8.25 inches of rainfall in the State in six days, a new all-time record.

In Wisconsin—The crest of the swollen Kickapoo passed Soldiers Grove, a village of 500, leaving it surrounded by water and causing damage estimated at $500,000.

In the Middle West—A brief respite of cool breezes and showers ended and a heat wave set in, which began immediately to add to the Nation's heat toll of 150 for the summer. Carl Stewart, 19, son of the sheriff of McCurtain County, Okla., died at Idabel.

Mercury at 110.

Highest marks of the season were reported in many communities, including Wellington, Kans., 110; Arkansas City, Kans., 109; Bartlesville, Okla., 108, and Wichita, Kans., 107. From 25 to 50 per cent of the corn crop in eastern and central Kansas has been damaged, the Weather Bureau reported. The temperature at Kansas City was 100, and St. Louis reported 90 or more for the fifteenth consecutive day. The mercury was at from 95 to 100 throughout Iowa. In Nebraska, Lincoln had 99 yesterday, compared to 97 Tuesday. Carbondale, Ill., reported 104; Dallas, Tex., 95. Minnesota readings hovered around 90, with warmer weather forecast.

In the Philippine Islands, floods of last week had killed 110 within the town of Dagupan, Pangasinan Province, according to reports. Further reports, from correspondents of the Manila Daily Bulletin said 126 were dead or missing in three provinces. Damage was estimated at $1,500,000.

Town officials at Binnaley reported 50 were drowned and 52 others had perished in the capsizing of two fishing boats in the nearby Aboleg River. Four were known dead and three missing in flooded Sur Province. Nine were reported dead in Bulacan Province.

Gov. Gen. Frank Murphy declared a state of emergency in several towns to stop profiteering, and health officials were busy preventing epidemics. Red Cross and other organizations strove to organize relief.

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Aug. 7.—One hundred and twenty-six persons were reported dead or missing tonight in floods that ravaged three provinces north of Manila last week.

Dispatches received over restored communication lines said 110 were dead or missing in or near the town of Dagupan, Province of Pangasinan.

With damage exceeding $1,500,000, district engineers said all reports indicated the disaster approached that wrought by last year's typhoons which swept the central Philippines, killing more than 400.

Other reports of the recent storm included one that 50 persons were drowned in Binmaley, near Dagupan. The capsizing of two fishing boats in the Aboleg River, also near Dagupan, was said to have caused 52 other deaths.

Many villages of central and northern Luzon Island were flooded, unconfirmed reports said.

$2,550,000 Is Voted To Cool the Capitol

The House wasn't fooled yesterday by Washington's agreeable drop in temperature or by the vague promise of a short session next year.

Anticipating other sultry summers in the Capital, House members adopted a Senate amendment to the second deficiency appropriations bill providing $2,550,000 for air conditioning the entire Capitol and office buildings.

The House also adopted the Senate amendment appropriating $800,000 for the purchase of additional playground and recreational sites by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Included in the conference report adopted by the House was another $1,200,000 for District items, including $45,000 for the Health Department.

The measure now goes to the White House for the President's signature as the conference report was adopted by the Senate on Monday. A total of approximately $300,000,000 is carried in the bill.

Tugwell Asks Fair Judgment For Land Plans

Don't Disapprove Because 'We Are Dangerous,' He Urges Farmers.

By the Associated Press.

Ithaca, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture, today asked that the Administration's land conservation and agricultural readjustment program be not disapproved "on the ground that we are dangerous fellows."

In an address at the Tompkins County development meeting, Tugwell, who also is rural resettlement administrator, spoke of the necessity for the Federal Government to handle the problem of putting land to better uses.

"This implies, therefore, that we must continuously consult the individuals, whose interests we are charged with the duty of promoting, as to their ambitions. We can do nothing which smells of the armchair, of the bureaucraft or of the student's lamp.

"We must enlist the best brains, the ablest administrators and the most vigorous executives who can be drafted into public service, but we must place them at the service of the public or we are frivolous and meddlesome. We must, above all, be judged not by what we say but by what we do.

"American politics are paved with good intentions. I do not ask you to approve this program on the ground that we who are doing it mean well or that our hearts are in the right place. At the same time, I ask you not to disapprove the program on the ground that we are dangerous fellows. This undertaking must be judged entirely by itself, by what it accomplishes and by what it is, not by what anybody hopes or fears it may accomplish."

Alexandria Motor Bus Line Is Denied

Traffic on Route 1 Excessive, Board Holds.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 7.—Giving the consideration of public safety as its reason, the State corporation commission today denied the application of a motor bus line to operate between Washington and Alexandria on U. S. Route 1.

The company, Monumental Lines, Inc., was the first applicant to be denied the right to operate interstate passenger bus service in Virginia.

In the opinion of the Commonwealth, written by Commissioner H. Lester Hooker, traffic over the Washington-Alexandria road is now "excessive," and therefore the granting of the certificate "would unduly endanger the life and property of the general public traveling over this route."

The City of Alexandria, the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, the board of supervisors of Arlington County, and the Alexandria, Barcroft and Washington Transit Co. opposed the petition, which was heard by the commission on April 26.

Judge Suspends Terms For Illegal Operation

Lynchburg, Va., Aug. 7 (AP).—Judge Don Halsey, of Corporation Court, yesterday suspended three-year prison sentences imposed upon Dr. J. A. Pollard, West Lynchburg physician, and Mrs. Lillian Thornton, nurse, after they had been convicted by a jury of performing an illegal operation.

The judge said his action was supported by a petition signed by all twelve jurors, asking the terms be suspended.

Fairfax Board Assails State Highway Group

Resolution Asserts Blame Shifted in Regard to Secondary Roads.

The State Highway Commission of Virginia was severely criticized yesterday in a resolution adopted by the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County for its tactics in allegedly issuing "misleading information" to the citizens of the county in regard to secondary roads.

The resolution adopted by unanimous action of the board stated that the board has been constantly criticized by groups appearing before it because of the inadequate maintenance of various roads in the secondary system. These groups stated they have been advised that if the board would recommend improvement of the particular road in which the group was interested, it would be given favorable consideration by the commission. It is alleged that this misled the people of the county to believe that the failure to properly maintain the roads in the secondary system is due to a lack of interest by the board and its unwillingness to request road improvement.

The resolution concludes by declaring "that this board now enters its earnest protest against the continuation by the State Highway Commission and its officers and employes of the writing of such letters to parties complaining about the road situation in this county, and thereby leading such parties to believe that the failure to have their requests granted is due to the action of this board, and that it earnestly requests the State Highway Department, in response to complaints received by it in respect to the secondary system of highways, to advise such parties that it has exclusive jurisdiction and control over the construction, betterment and maintenance of such highways, and, if it be so advised, that its inability to properly maintain the same is due to lack of sufficient funds."

State Highway Unit Plans Expansion

By the Associated Press.

Richmond Va., Aug. 7.—The State highway department will be expanded in both its office force and its field personnel to handle the new Federal work relief road program, Commissioner H. G. Shirley said today.

Shirley said no plans for expansion had been worked out in detail, but the department undoubtedly would have to rent additional quarters and hire more draftsmen and bookkeepers as soon as the $13,500,000 program is approved by Federal authorities. The greater part of the expansion will come in the field, he said, as additional men will be added to the forces of the eight construction districts.

"Our greatest problem will be to find skilled workmen," he added. "We are going to need a number of steel workers, machinists and other workers in the steel trades."

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., Aug. 7.—State Senator Robert O. Norris, of Lively, prominently mentioned and strongly supported for the new Federal judgeship for Eastern Virginia, announced here today that he has withdrawn as a candidate. He gave no reason for his decision.

Unanimously indorsed by the Northern Neck Bar Association as well as by lawyers throughout the State, Senator Norris was generally regarded as one of the leading candidates for the judgeship. He was renominated for the Senate yesterday.

Petitions Score Move to Scrap Annapolis Line

Nice Discourages Special Session; Shunts Request to U.S. Emergency Units.

Petitions protesting discontinuance of the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Railroad were circulated through two Maryland counties yesterday as Gov. Nice discouraged special legislation as a means of preventing abandonment of the electric line.

The petitions, presented by residents of Prince Georges and Anne Arundel counties, point out that hundreds of commuters will be without means of reaching their offices in the cities if the railroad is scrapped August 20.

"Believing in the permanancy of its service," read the protests, "many of us with offices and work in Washington, Baltimore and Annapolis have bought land and established homes along the line, and are dependent upon it for transportation and as a carrier of freight.

"Cessation of service would be productive of vast inconvenience and great loss.

"This road serves not only people adjacent to it but those in a wide area of the counties, from which there are no other rail facilities—South, West and Rhode rivers sections, as well as large inland areas." The petitions will be presented legislators and railroad officials.

Gov. Nice was approached Wednesday by a group of citizens from Anne Arundel County who asked that a special session of the Legislature be called to give the railroad a subsidy to enable it to continue operation.

Although the Governor took the matter under consideration, he made it plain that he was afraid the State was not in a position to give aid at this time.

He advised the delegation to appeal to President Roosevelt or some Federal emergency division. He said his name could be used as the backer of any reasonable plan.

It is believed that more than 1,000 commuters in nearby Prince Georges County will be left destitute of transportation means should the road be scrapped. Most of these work in Washington, though some have offices in Baltimore and Annapolis.

Paralysis Report Denied by Official

Dr. A. B. Hooten, Prince Georges County health officer, yesterday contradicted a rumor that there was a new case of infantile paralysis in Riverdale, Md.

"We have had no case reported in Riverdale in the past three weeks," he said. "We had one case before that time. This person is now in a Washington hospital. Any possible infection from him would have broken out long ago."

Dr. Hooten was referring to Edgar Peeden, 8-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Gernie Peeden, who is at Children's Hospital. Physicians there say that he has recovered and will be released at the end of the week. They boy is believed to have contracted the disease during a North Carolina trip last month.

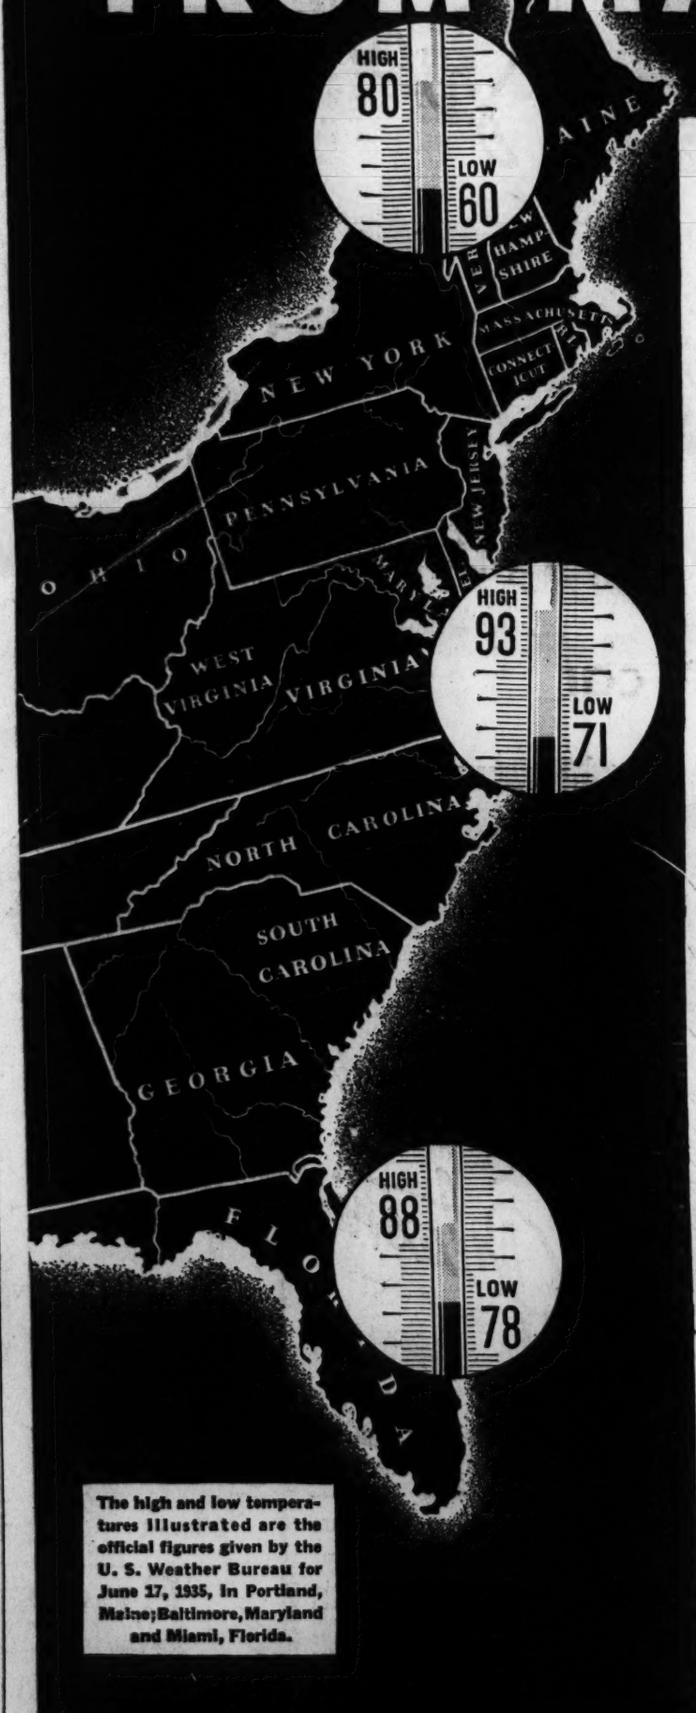
FROM MAINE TO FLORIDA



The high and low temperatures illustrated are the official figures given by the U. S. Weather Bureau for June 17, 1935, in Portland, Maine; Baltimore, Maryland and Miami, Florida.

"AIR-CONDITIONED" AMERICAN GAS

BEATS THERMOMETERS ON THEIR HOME GROUNDS

IT'S no secret that gasoline motors are erratic in performance when you run into humidity and temperature changes. And it's no secret that you do get humidity and temperature changes, daily and monthly, both on short runs in your particular locality and on longer trips.

"AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas beats thermometers on their home grounds. By carefully designing this gasoline to cover the weather variations in each locality during each month of the year, we have succeeded in making a gasoline which will give maximum performance throughout all weather conditions. "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas gives uniform, dependable performance on either short or long runs. Here's why:

We build into this gasoline some things no other regular gasoline has. We start out with a 100% Pure Petroleum Base. And we keep it pure. No acid is used in our refining operations. And we don't have to add any of the chemicals used in most other regular gasolines.

With the help of our new refinery and modern processes, we have turned out a regular gasoline so new—so modern—so different—that "air-conditioning" is only one of its features.

OTHER GUARANTEED FEATURES!

GREATER NET POWER: "Air-conditioned" gasoline plus clean burning guarantees superior performance. Hence, GREATER NET POWER.

HIGHER ANTI-KNOCK: By new processes—without acid treatment—in the world's most modern refinery, we obtain naturally from 100% Pure Petroleum Base a higher anti-knock value than other regular gasolines get artificially by the addition of chemicals to bring up anti-knock alone.

MORE MILES: Greater net power and higher anti-knock rating net more miles to the gallon than any other regular gasoline.

"AIR-CONDITION" Your Motor!

Stop at any Yellow and Black American Gas Pump and fill up your tank with "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. Then keep your car "air-conditioned" with this amazing new "AIR-CONDITIONED" American Gas. Even though it costs us more to produce, it is being sold at regular gas price from Maine to Florida and inland by thousands of American dealers and stations.

Receivers Ask County to Drop Railway Taxes

Continued Service Depends on Action, Attorney Tells Board.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. Box 245. Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The future existence of the service now rendered by the Washington Old Dominion Railway and the possibility of collecting taxes on the railway's property in the future depends on the willingness of the various jurisdictions of northern Virginia to remit the past-due taxes, Wilson M. Farr, attorney for the receivers of the road, told the Board of Supervisors of Fairfax County yesterday.

The Old Dominion Railroad is one of the few short-line railways in Virginia that has not ceased operation because of the competition of the motor bus and freight lines. It has been in the hands of the receivers for more than two years and the Georgetown-Great Falls branch has been abandoned. It was originally a part of the Southern Railway and was leased to the late John R. McLean and the Elkins interests. The Southern still owns the right of way and the tracks.

Purchaser Found.

Farr told the board that the counties and towns along the right of way could collect the taxes, but to do so would cause the abandonment of the railway. He stated that he had found a purchaser for the railroad who would lease the road and give bond to guarantee the taxes and operation of the road for one year provided the various jurisdictions would release the collection of all past-due taxes.

It was said that the abandonment of this road would be an irreparable hardship on the people and communities along the line, especially the town of Herndon, and would materially decrease the value of property in most sections in the northern part of the county. People living in this section would be practically marooned because of the lack of proper highways and transportation facilities.

A resolution was adopted by the board stating that if legally possible it would remit the past-due taxes provided that all other jurisdictions along the railway would do the same and that if the board lacked the authority to take this action it would seek legislation at the next session of the State Assembly granting this power.

County Action.

The resolution provided that the action of the board at this time did not release the claim of the county for taxes against the Old Dominion and the Southern Railway until similar action had been taken by the other jurisdictions and provided that the future operation was assured by the proper agreement between the purchaser and the Southern Railway.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Circuit Court of Arlington and Fairfax counties, has stated that unless some action is taken he would sign an order allowing the receivers of the railway to cease operations. A hearing on the matter will be held on September 16, the opening day of the fall term of the Fairfax County Circuit Court.

It has been stated that the Southern Railway has declared that it will not continue to operate the road if it is returned to them and it plans to salvage the tracks and equipment and abandon the line between Rosslyn and Bluemont.

Montgomery County Records Year's First Paralysis Death

1111 Oak Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone Shepherd 2363.

Montgomery County's first death this year from infantile paralysis occurred yesterday when Kathleen Norris, 11-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Norris, 626 Ridge avenue, Silver Spring, Md., died in Children's Hospital.

Stricken last Thursday, the child was ordered removed to the hospital the following day by her physician, Dr. Norman C. Shoemaker, of Silver Spring. The case was reported as "very severe," and for the past several days the child had been in a coma.

Kathleen attended the East Silver Spring Elementary School, her family having moved to Silver Spring about seven years ago.

In addition to her parents, Kathleen is survived by a brother, John, 15, and a sister, Louise, 8, who live at home. Both children were said to be in good health.

Funeral services were held yesterday at the Monocacy Cemetery at Bealsville, Md. The Rev. Ralph D. Smith, pastor of the Woodside M. E. Church, officiated at services held at the grave.

The Social Service League of Montgomery County is co-operating with the welfare organizations of Prince Georges County, and of Arlington County, Va., in a series of conferences with officials of the Community Chest of Washington in anticipation of the 1936 budget raising campaign of the Chest, according to a report made by Frederick P. Lee at the meeting of the executive committeee of the league Tuesday night. It is hoped that a plan may be adopted whereby funds for the suburban areas may be obtained concurrently with those for the Community Chest, especially in the Government departments.

Resolutions memorializing the Rev. Parke P. Flournoy, of Washington; Mrs. Henry L. Wells, of Rockville; Mrs. Louis L. Boekhoff, Chevy Chase, and Mrs. Archibald Small, Silver Spring, members of the league, who died during the past year, were adopted on motion of Mrs. Henry J. Finley, honorary president.

At the request of the county welfare board, the league will continue to function for the board through the month of August, reimbursement for the cost to be made by the board, and report to be made at the next meeting of the executive committee, September 10.

The July report of the executive secretary, Miss Ruth A. Bolton, shows 255 cases handled by the league during the month; with a total average case load per worker of 66. In the child placing and supervision department, 123 children are being cared for, with 76 children being boarded in private homes. Members of the staff traveled 4,120 miles in making 606 visits in the county.

Fingerprints may convict Clarence Thomas, alias 'Saps," colored, 21, of the robbery of the store of E. Magruder at Hunting Hill, Md. He will be arraigned in county police court at Rockville, Md., today.

Thomas was arrested Saturday. He denied he had been in the vicinity of the store, but fingerprints found on the pane of a rear window correspond with his, according to Detective Sergt. Theodore Vollten, of the Montgomery County Criminal Identification Bureau.

Magruder was sleeping in the front of the store when the robber entered through the back and broke open the cash register, taking approximately $12.

Six members of the auxiliary to Takoma Park American Legion Post No. 28 were elected delegates to the State convention in Ocean City, Md., in September at a meeting Tuesday night at the home of the president, Mrs. L. E. Beacock.

The delegates are Mrs. E. Brook Fetty, chairman; Mrs. John C. Gale, Mrs. Mildred Burr, Mrs. Anna M. Shadle, Mrs. Leo M. Cavanaugh and Mrs. H. P. Ware.

The auxiliary voted to donate funds toward the expense of sending the drum and bugle corps of the Sons of the American Legion to the convention. Mrs. Beacock, who with Mr. Beacock will soon move to New Jersey, was presented a china naval plate in appreciation of her efforts while president of the auxiliary. Mrs. N. D. Guerrier, vice president, will succeed Mrs. Beacock.

The board of directors of the Little Theater of Takoma Park will meet tonight at 8 o'clock in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick L. Pratt, Chestnut avenue, Takoma Park, Md. Selection of various plays to be presented by the dramatic group next season will be discussed.

Survey for Road Nearly Completed

To Connect Lee Boulevard With Memorial Bridge.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 7.—Surveys are near completion for a new road to connect Lee boulevard with the Arlington Memorial Bridge across the Potomac at Washington, Highway Commissioner Shirley said today.

The road will leave the Lee Highway at Falls Church and run along the north side of Arlington Cemetery and Fort Myer to the bridge.

Allocation of $100,000 has been made by the highway department for rights of way, and Arlington County has agreed to pay right of way sums in excess of this, it was pointed out.

7 Men Jailed At Hyattsville Police Hearing

2 Held for Grand Jury; Others Are Committed in Default of Fines.

Unable to produce either fines or bonds, seven men arraigned in Hyattsville Police Court yesterday were committed to jail.

Dorsey Ayers, of Bladensburg, charged with assault with intent to rob C. L. Dearstine, of Edmonston, Md., Saturday, was held for the grand jury. He also was given ten days for disorderly conduct.

James Bercraft, of Beltsville, Md., waived jury trial and asked for completion of the hearing before Judge George B. Merrick on a charge of attempting to shoot Clara Bercraft with a shotgun. He was held for further hearing.

An assault with intent to rob charge held Oscar Hawkins, of Lakeland, Md., for the grand jury. He is said to have struck Claude Lee, of that town, on the head on the railroad tracks near Berwyn and robbed him of $8. James Watkins, of near Hyattsville was fined $1 for hitting Clara Barton on the head with a piece of iron. He was sentenced to five days in jail in default.

On charge of disorderly conduct, Buster Foster received a ten-day jail sentence and Leonard Henry a 15-day sentence. Both are from Bladensburg.

Daniel E. Malloy, of Hyattsville, was given a six-month term in the House of Correction for driving in excess of 60 miles an hour. George Taylor, who exceeded 25 miles an hour in Hyattsville and had no lights, was fined $25. Defaulting, he received a 25-day sentence.

Cannery Started To Aid Farmers

'NewYorker' Fails to Carry Out Tomato Agreement.

By the Associated Press.

Leonardtown, Md., Aug. 7.—A cannery will be set up in St. Marys City this week to aid 15 St. Marys County farmers who have 15,000 bushels of tomatoes on their hands.

The farmers, after a conference last year with a "man from New York," planted much of their acreage in tomatoes on the belief the New Yorker would buy them. The tomatoes came through in good shape, but the New Yorker has not yet shown up to buy them.

Transportation rates to Baltimore and Washington were too high to allow the growers to market their crops in those cities.

St. Marys County residents have come to the rescue of the farmers by buying and canning large quantities of tomatoes. The opening of the cannery is expected to further reduce the loss.

Police at Bladensburg Make Drive on Speeders

Caesar's Wife.

Whether parking regulations apply to public officials is the question of the moment in nearby Rockville. Recently the town council commissioned a police officer to enforce "without fear or favor" the local parking ordinances. The officer forthwith discovered the car of the county police judge parked overtime. He tagged it, as well as other cars belonging to town and county officials similarly guilty of ignoring the law. When the cases were called in the county court, the judge dismissed them, stating that public officials should not be fined for parking overtime.

It is just this attitude that accounts for a good part of the deplorable traffic accident record today. Something of the same dangerous disregard for the rules of the road lies behind almost every accident story. "Step on it," says a voice from the back seat, "I know all the cops on this road." Such arrogant disdain for safety regulations, such positive assurance that the law can be beaten, such favor-seeking, such wire-pulling and such accidents all stem from the knowledge that some courts can be influenced to blink at willful infractions of the traffic laws.

May the mayor and council of Rockville do their full duty in disillusioning their official colleague of any presumed right to immunity. In the matter of manipulating automobiles one man is no better and no less subject to communal restriction than another.

Gentleman And Scholar.

Bishop Shahan brought Catholic University to a high level before he was succeeded by Bishop Ryan. Bishop Ryan has raised that level higher.

It was to be expected that his attainments in metaphysics would leave their mark in the fields of dialectics and ethics. However, this mark by no means designates his whole accomplishment. His love for the classics, his broad and deep culture, his youthful yet practical interest in everything that education touches and that touches education: these, allied to his keen executive power, have in seven years left him, at the age of scarcely 49, with an academic-administrative record which is almost unique.

Moreover, James Hugh Ryan has set his impress on more than an institution of learning. If the charm of the scholar is his, so is the charm of the kindly human being. If he has ecclesiastical wisdom, he has also in high degree those gentlemanly qualities which win friends in every walk of life, in every faith. When the titular Bishop of Modra leaves the District of Columbia to become the actual Bishop of Omaha, the loss will be not only that of Catholic University. The City of Washington will share it.

Perpetual Motion.

What has seemed a long time a'coming looks now as if it were almost at hand. And that is a Government arts program planned to provide relief royalties, in a manner of speaking, for authors, musicians and artists. Of the $27,000,000 recommended for the whole project by an advisory committee, some $6,288,000 is designed to take care of those writers who are finding it impossible to live in the style to which they would like to become accustomed. Apparently the old theory that genius does its best work under difficulties is just a fallacy. At this rate, the wolf at the door will soon be the only one struggling along without Federal aid.

Happily, office routine will not be allowed to dull the bright edge of genius. It is all being planned with a sop to the Muses in mind. A staff of unemployed scribblers is to make all reports to the Works Progress Administrator, these being designed to take the form of "narrative reviews." As a concession to the artistic, "readability" rather than technical information will be emphasized in these reports on WPA activities. It is to be surmised that this will give the necessary latitude for an election year. Gathering material for a national guide book will also occupy the time and talent of future Hemingways, Cathers and Saroyans.

Perhaps the most provocative project outlined under this allotment is the one which would put authors to work on a "thorough preparation of an encyclopedia of government functions." Not only does this raise the old conjecture of which came first—the hen or the egg—but it offers an interesting analogy to the cat-and-rat farm of happy memory. The Government is proposing to establish an office so that its employes may write about the functions of an office that has been established so that they may write about it. Or is this getting complicated? Oh, well, maybe Gertrude Stein will understand it.

Beside The Point.

In spite of issues in which the quality of his reasoning and the validity of his conclusions are very questionable, the statement made by Robert H. Jackson before the Senate Finance Committee is in one sense an important contribution to constructive thinking on national fiscal policy. The counsel of the Bureau of Internal Revenue is the first witness on the current tax bill who has deigned to disclose any reasoned argument as a basis for immediate legislation in this field. In other words, with the bill already passed by the House, Mr. Jackson has done the job which should have been expected from Secretary Morgenthau at the outset.

Nevertheless, what stands out in Mr. Jackson's testimony is that the pending tax measure is by no means calculated to further the ends outlined by this Treasury spokesman as socially desirable. His threefold conclusions have little or no concrete relationship to the bill now before the Senate.

In his presentation Mr. Jackson argued that the tax burden has been shifting so as to fall with increasing pressure on those less able to pay, and urged that "the trend should be reversed." He then employed Treasury statistics to illustrate an increasing tendency to concentration of wealth, in spite of diminished national income, and asked for "a more consistent application of graduating the tax rate according to ability to pay." And, finally, Mr. Jackson denounced the legal means of evasion available to the wealthy, recommending that these channels should be closed.

With the morality of these three broad contentions no socially minded citizen is likely to quarrel. But the point is that the actual bill now under consideration fails to forward the objectives for which Mr. Jackson persuasively argues. He has put himself in the position of a consulting physician who explains the symptoms and possible presence of smallpox to a group of surgeons who are about to perform a questionable operation for appendicitis. The effect of such a consultation should not be to hasten the excision of a normally harmless organ.

Mr. Jackson, for instance, is assailing the AAA rather than defending the pending tax bill when he recommends "a recovery tax program * * * that will not impair the purchasing power of the mass of consumers." Indeed it can be argued that he is here definitely attacking the very legislation which he ostensibly sponsors. Even in its present modified form the graduated corporate income tax, designed to penalize size and not to raise revenue, has an obvious tendency to increase unemployment and thereby further impair mass purchasing power. Equally inconsistent is Mr. Jackson's conclusions that "the base for our income tax is now seriously narrow," when contrasted with the failure of the bill to apply increases on incomes under $50,000.

This Treasury testimony and the pending legislation also fail to click on the subject of concentration of wealth. The bill would doubtless do much to prevent the rich from getting richer. But whether it would be equally effective is keeping the poor from getting poorer is a fundamental point which Mr. Jackson overlooks. "Under the prevailing distribution of income," he says, "a large proportion of the population lives at or even below the level * * * necessary for adequate subsistence." This is as undesirable as it is deplorable. But the pending bill will do less than nothing to alter that situation.

The same inconsistency stands out in the Treasury spokesman's remarks on tax evasion. His comment on tax deductions for rich men's hobbies, such as show farms and racing stables, is well taken. But the present bill is not directed to eliminating such abuses of privilege. Still less will it close the broad avenue of escape provided by tax-exempt securities. Even while demonstrating the loss of public revenue thus permitted, Mr. Jackson must have known that the pending bill would only stimulate this form of tax evasion.

Mr. Jackson's detailed testimony was on the whole beside the point at issue. He clearly recognizes the transition of our national economy from a stage in which individual accumulation of wealth was essential to one in which a better distribution is imperative. His exposition would be very helpful as the basis for a new and carefully planned revenue measure. But far from supporting the present bill, the internal revenue counsel has in reality emphasized the desirability of a fresh start.

The Paper And The Man.

By Col. Adler's appointment of Julian LaRose Harris as executive editor of the Chattanooga Times, a very honorable newspaper tradition is carried on for a highly honorable newspaper. The Chattanooga Times has a laudable history, but Mr. Harris has a laudable record.

This is not merely to recall his technical and practical abilities. In New York and in Paris, in Chicago and the South, he has successfully directed Sunday supplements and editorial pages, made his mark as city editor, managing editor, advertising manager. For his fight against the Ku Klux Klan he won the Pulitizer journalism prize. Nevertheless, Capt. Harris—who gained that title in the military intelligence during the World War—is a man of letters as well as a newspaperman. He is the son of the loved creator of "Uncle Remus" and, by both inheritance and education, has the literary background.

There is nowadays a good deal of complaint that the American newspaper has lost in culture and individuality almost as much as it has gained in news range and efficiency. Only some of this complaint is justified. Where in the United States, foreign critics inquire, is now that type of director whose general learning touched every department of the journal which bore his name at its "masthead," whose personality—expressed in virtuosity or gusto, in fine tact or the bold lack thereof—informed every feature? The answer is in such men as Julian Harris, at such posts as the one he is now about to assume.

The Bonus And The Item Veto.

The decision of veterans' leaders to lay aside plans for pushing bonus legislation further this session, and in particular to abandon efforts to attach a rider to the tax bill, was wisely taken. They are to be congratulated not only for facilitating an early adjournment of Congress, but also for recognizing the undesirability of attempting to resuscitate a measure already rejected this session. There is no more justification in raising an issue twice before the same legislative group than there is in requiring a man to stand trial twice for the same offense.

It may not have been concern for an early adjournment, for parliamentary logic, or for the defects of the tax bill that prompted the move. Perhaps it was only belief that nothing but defeat lies ahead for the bonus at least this year. In any case, the veterans have an assurance that a bonus vote will be called at the earliest possible moment of the next session. At that time, of course, the question can be posed in a separate bill, in its own right. If raised today, it could only stand a chance in the shape of an extraneous rider to some other bill. And, good or bad, these should be considered on their own merits.

The possibility that it might have been laid thus before the President as a part of other legislation has helped to revive discussion of the item veto. An amendment to the Constitution enabling the Chief Executive to exercise a selective veto—to sign the essential portion of a bill while refusing to accept a totally illogical rider—has been urged with increasing force of late.

A constitutional amendment, however, is a serious matter. The essential point to be decided is whether the difficulty, against which remedy is sought, traces back to a fundamental defect of the Constitution or whether it can be attributed to a created abuse of the organic law. The answer here is that the need for the item veto arises only because of deliberate parliamentary abuse.

The legislative rider is nowhere accepted as a feature of regular parliamentary procedure, and for good reason. It is a device, a subterfuge, totally at variance with straightforward legislation. Let chicanery be frowned upon in Congress, let a proposal stand or fall by its own merit, and the need for the item veto vanishes.

The Sandpiper's Song.

New England has been commemorating a centennial in the celebration of which the rest of the country might have done well to join: the 100th anniversary of Celia Leighton Thaxter's birth. Not only the greatest children of Apollo deserve to rest among his best beloved. A minor poet may also partake of universality. Mrs. Thaxter was a Yankee of the Yankees. She was also a writer of some verse that no lover of good verse may ignore.

The confidante of Whittier, Lowell and James T. Fields, she was born at Portsmouth, N. H., and passed nearly all her life among the Isles of Shoals, a countryside and seaside where her family had lived for 200 years. She could rhyme "Nikolina" to "seen her." She would commit such trivialities as "Little Gustava." Yet equally there sang in her blood the loveliness of New Hampshire's bit of ocean, the grandeur of the Maine coast. And, since the lyric fairies attended her christening, she became just such a singer of those scenes as her friend, Childe Hassam, became their painter.

From her their "fair familiar features" kept back not a single secret. She saw "beauty manifold" in "the sunflecked shadow of the stately trees," felt it—

"When on the leafless stalk the brown buds swell,
When the grass brightens and the days grow long."

But she saw it as clearly, felt it as keenly, in the stinging nor'easter and the grim siege of the snow.

"Above our heads the sullen clouds
Scud black and swift across the sky;
Like silent ghosts in misty shrouds
Stand out the white lighthouses high:"

A Japanese in the Isles of Shoals; two pen-strokes—and a picture!

The author of "The Sandpiper" was not a genius, but she was more than a New England Bryant. She had all of Wordsworth's literary faults, but she had little lack of Wordsworth's literary virtues.

A Pennsylvania girl spent the past five years learning how to bounce a ball 7,000 times without a miss. Offhand, this sounds like a foolish thing to have done, but on the other hand what have you accomplished during the past five years?

Geologists say Buffalo has begun gradually to move south. It seems that the city decided to do a little shuffling off on its own account.

Italians are probably glad that Mussolini has discontinued handshaking at public receptions. Let the mailed fist squeeze Ethiopia!

Letters To The Editor.

Honorable, Not Satisfied.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This morning's Post, in its story concerning the arbitration award granting a large increase in wages to Capital Transit Co.'s employes, quotes me as having stated that the award was "entirely satisfactory" to myself and other officials of this company.

Last evening a Post reporter, whose name I unfortunately did not get, asked me over the telephone what the company had to say about the award. My answer was that our agreement with the men provided for an arbitration, the arbitration had been carried out, and that the company would, of course, abide by the findings of the arbitration board. He then asked whether or not the management of the company was satisfied with the award and I stated definitely that we considered the increase in wages larger than was warranted under the circumstances and were not satisfied with the award but would, of course, comply with it.

The stockholders of this company, who were formerly stockholders of the Capital Traction Co., have received only $1 per share dividends since 1932, and it is quite to be expected that they would feel aggrieved if the company's management were "entirely satisfied" by a wage increase of approximately 20 per cent, which will cost the company between $650,000 and $700,000 per year.

I am, of course, aware that the management's opinion regarding the amount of the wage increase is not a matter of public interest, but I believe you will understand that it is important to us, and I hope you will correct the misstatement inadvertently made in this morning's paper.

JOHN N. HANNA.
President, Capital Transit Co.
Washington, Aug. 7.

Wealth And The Nation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Are there any wealthy persons or heads of large corporations in the Democratic Party? Evidently not, or Mr. Roosevelt would not have suggested a share-the-wealth plan. His soak-the-rich plan seems to be aimed at such men as Ford, Mellon, Rockefeller, etc. It was not their fault that they became overburdened with wealth. Rugged individualism is the secret of their success. They started at the bottom and the ascension to the heights of wealth has been slow.

Have they not all been benefactors of libraries, art galleries and free institutions? Is it right to kill the goose that lays the golden egg? What would the country be had it not been for men like those referred to above?

FRISBY GILBERT.
Washington, Aug. 5.

Poison Gas From Streets.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We are a long-suffering people and we do not act until thousands are killed. Canary birds are used to find the existence of foul air in mines. The writer has a young canary bird. As soon as warm weather and open windows arrived, the bird, in its cage in the front window, by which the line of buses on G street pass continually, emitting their deadly carbon monoxide, began to droop and breathe in spasmodic gasps.

I closed the front windows, bringing the cage in the back of the house and the bird revived. We have not so much sense as the mine owners. How long are we going to put up with this poison?

F. S. AUGUSTE.
Washington, Aug. 4.

Horsepower And Motor Accidents.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days ago you had an editorial on excessive horsepower in motor vehicles. Recently when the Takoma Park Citizens Association had the same theme under discussion, the American Automobile Association furnished us with data tending to show that excessive speed was the predominant cause of accidents, more especially on country highways. All the data that I have read support the arguments you have submitted.

As in other matters it is likely to be more difficult to go back to reasonable speed than it would have been to check this tendency before we had gone so far. Immediately there arises the question of choosing the best method of exercising the necessary restraint.

It would seem to be an almost hopeless task of getting co-ordinate action fom the 49 different units which would promise any measure in such matters. The only method which wuold promise any measure of success would be to call upon Congress to enact a measure under its authority to regulate interstate commerce. However, there is a growing resistance to the assumption of further powers by Congress; a stricter construction of the Constitution is demanded.

I am suggesting a plan which might succeed for a similar reason. Instead of trying to control the manufacturers of automobiles, I suggest that an effort be made to induce State Legislatures to require the use of mechanical governors which could not be adjusted to permit more than 55 miles an hour. Signs on the principal highways entering such States would give notice of the law and directions to the nearest garage where the governors could be rented or purchased and installed. The A. A. A. could serve as a clearing agency for deposits and refunds when the visitor desired to leave the State at some other point. A few pioneer States which inaugurated efficient machinery of enforcement would be object lessons that ought to induce all the others to fall into line.

When most of the highways were put under such control, the auto factories would be quick to avoid the provisions of superfluous power. It doubtless would result in material savings which could be passed on to the consumer. I hope it may be possible to keep this matter before civic organizations, and if the A. A. A. can be induced to lend us its aid, it ought to be possible to show some progress in the near future.

GUY CLINTON,
Chairman Committee on Police, Fire and Public Safety, Takoma Park Citizens Association.
Takoma Park, Aug. 4.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Wilbur Rogers' explanation of the cause of automobile casualties in today's Letters to the Editor is interesting, but I fear he has missed the point. It seems to be a fundamental human failing for people to blame inanimate objects for human failures. He places the blame on horsepower, failing to perceive that that horsepower has to be humanly guided.

If you will note for a moment the trend of increasing horsepower in other transportation devices, such as buses, locomotives, airplanes, etc., with a constantly decreasing percentage of accidents, both per capita and to miles traveled, you may be persuaded to pause and reflect a little.

Automobile manufacturers are not in any sense competing with one another to produce, necessarily, faster cars. They are keenly competing to produce more economical cars. It may sound paradoxical to the layman, but it is a technical fact that, within reasonable limits, higher horsepowers are much more economical than lower horsepowers. For the same driving ranges higher horsepowers will give greater mileage, will reduce oil consumption and repair costs and vastly increase ease in handling in traffic, in comparison with the exact opposite with respect to lower horsepowers.

Because a car can do 85 miles an hour or better, it does not follow that a driver is obliged to operate it that fast. His own discretion dictates the speed of his travel. The significant thing is that a car which can go that fast can be driven ever so much farther and longer at much less cost per mile than a slower, lower horsepower car at speeds ranging from 40 to 50 miles an hour. And also, strange as it may seem, there are as many casualties at low speeds as there are at higher speeds.

So let's place the blame where it belongs—not on the cars, but on the drivers. Let's frankly admit that the real cause is failure by an alarmingly large number of us to accept the proper amount of responsibility while we are driving. Besides, did you ever attempt to drive over the Uniontown hill in a 30-horsepower car?

E. N. BLYE.
Chicago, Aug. 1.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "Death and Horsepower," in your issue of August 1 makes pathetic reading in connection with the letter, "Horsepower and Traffic Fatalities," because everybody, that is to say nobody, is to blame for existing conditions. There and only there is the remedy, if any, not in blaming manufacturers for making the cars that all, from President to pauper, want to buy.

I know a woman, who admits being 65, who has a good job and drives to it every morning by her lone self in a new powerful five-seater. She buys a new car every other year. She claims to be a good driver, but from the viewpoint of the growing tide of fast traffic she is merely a cautious driver, slow in thought, never splitting seconds, never considering an inch as good as a yard. In other words, she is in the way. There is no logical reason whatsoever for that woman to be driving a powerful car in Washington; but there are thousands like her and the number is growing.

Let it grow fast, faster and faster, so that the structure, if unsound, may collapse of itself as soon as possible. Millions can not buy food because millions are holding on to jobs in order to buy luxuries, just as the woman above, at 65, hangs on to a job she does not need so she can afford to drive in congested Washington a powerful car she does not need. Perhaps such a state of things is wrong and unsound; but the saber-toothed tiger was not destroyed with letters to the editor, it was destroyed by the excessive growth of its saber teeth. M. J. FORTIE.

The Post Impressionist

Twa Corbies—And A Few More.

Post Office, Thursday.

EVER since he was first compelled to construe Horace, this Columnist has had a crow to pick with the crow critics.

"Movet cornicula risum"—the crowlet awakens ridicule? We couldn't see why. "Bird of ill-omen"; even the Shakespeare of the Sonnets found it "suspect": we, in natural reaction against our schoolmasters and their text books, felt that the Corvus brachyrhynchus deserved a champion.

Mr. Hensel sends us a pamphlet of his, called 'Speaking of Crows," wherein he leads the anti-crow horses to water—and makes them eat crow.

Man, he says in effect, has always hated crows wholesale, and always upon insufficient reason. "Deeply implanted in the human breast is the desire to kill something." This desire long ago found it could express itself without offense—even with praise—against the crow. Now, nationally, the crow-crusade is receiving a strong artificial stimulus.

Wars are not the only sins laid to the door of the munitions-makers: we read that, not long ago, "a certain ammunition corporation decreed the annihilation" of the crow and "offered premiums to the gunmen"—note the invidious noun—"who would kill the greatest number." Then came a member of the Pennsylvania legislature with a bill providing that the State pay a bounty of five cents per crow-head.

It is these measures that rouse the wrath of Achilles Hensel.

He goes for that law-maker—compares him to a fond Eastern father "who had a wayward son that went from bad to worse, drifted West. One day a letter was received from him, and the old man assembled the family, to read it aloud. It wound up with the statement, 'I am in the Legislature now.' The father raised his glasses and, with a sigh, observed:

"'But he doesn't say what for'."

The case against the crow looks black—at first. Crows are chicken-thieves. They rob robins' nests and suck eggs. They are corn-brigands.

Even so, demands Mr. Hensel: Have crows no rights? And he answers emphatically that they have.

Have they not, he asks, some virtues. And he asseverates that their virtues average 52 per cent, against 48 per cent of vice.

Fair-minded Mr. Hensel grants that a chicken-stealing crow should be shot—but not, we take it, a crow merely suspected of chicken-stealing. All crows should be assumed innocent until proven guilty.

If the crow robs robins' nests, it is "only in the early spring. Robins appropriate the early cherries—but who would think of killing robins for the reason that they like cherries?" Suppose crows do suck eggs? "Unlike politicians," says Mr. Hensel, "the crows don't hide the shells."

Corn-thieves? "Use corn-repellant," Mr. Hensel advises. "It stalls not only the crow, but the squirrel and cut-worm, too."

Indeed, he entertains some doubt about the extent of the last-named crime. The crow's "share of insects is made up almost exclusively of species found on or near the ground," and these the bird secures "by turning up clods of earth . . . Men imagine that, in these operations, the crow is stealing corn."

Crows, as carrion-feeders, "supplement the turkey-buzzard—and he is protected." Two-thirds of the crow's food is composed of insects, "including many of the most destructive pests.

"In the stomach of one crow, 87 May-beetles were found; in another 72 wire-worms—corn-cutters, plus. In a Michigan crow's stomach were 483 small caterpillars. Are birds with such records and capacity assets or liabilities?"

But—nothing if not ethically minded—what the Post-Impressionist admires above all else in Mr. Hensel's pamphlet is his celebration of the crow's moral qualities. The crow, we thus learn, is the feathered personification of rugged individualism—and has a sense of humor. He is a summer-time optimist, yet in winter he adapts himself to the rigors of our climate with something more than resignation: with genuine good cheer.

Fifty-two per cent vs. 48 per cent!

Plainly, there is implicit in all this a lesson for Secretary Wallace and the AAA:

When Mr. Wallace and his Department want to increase agriculture production, let them come to Mr. Hensel and the Post-Impressionist to form a National Crow-Protection Society, or go to Mr. Arthur Garfield Hayes for the formation of a Crow's Civil Liberties Union.

But if Mr. Wallace and his Department want to curtail crops, then let them can the crow.

Fair Enough

New York, Aug. 7.

MISS ANNE SIBLEY, the Chicago girl who left college to join the sideshow at Coney Island, has now quit the sideshow to return to school. In the normal course of events she will get some sort of degree, marry, have children and settle down to a quiet existence. A useful life, to be sure, but often, as she hangs out the little garments and the good man's socks, or sits in for an afternoon of bridge with the girls of the neighborhood she will think of the family circle of strange people and feel restless.

The sideshow has the fascination of a frenzied dream. It is a world in which people horribly afflicted come to think of themselves as normal, and monsters sit gossiping, talking shop, and writing letters home between appearances on their little platforms.

Mr. C. C. Pyle had in his astounding aggregation of exotic educational oddities at the Chicago Century of Progress an ossified man named Harry, who lay on a little plush perch, scrawny, almost toothless and rigid and sent money home to his poor old brother in the hard coal country of Pennsylvania.

• • • •

THE professor who delivered a little lecture over each of the artists in Mr. Pyle's educational aggregation had an invariable opening for Harry.

"Ha, ha," he would shout. "And what have we here, my friends? Here we have Harry, the ossified man. Harry is a little stiff."

At that he would break into hearty laughter, in which Harry long ago had ceased to join. It was not that he resented a comment so personal, but merely that he had been hearing that bon mot as many as a dozen times a day for more than 30 years. The repetition, he said, "sometimes was like to drive him crazy."

Harry, too, had been a coal miner in his youth, but then, unaccountably, he had begun to ossify and after a few years was able to quit the hospitals, renounce the mines forever and follow a career of luxurious ease before the public eye. He was sorry for his poor old brother because the brother had had rheumatism and was no longer able to go into the mines. Consequently, at the age of 70, he was unemployed and destitute except for occasional remittances from his more fortunate brother. Harry had seen the world. He had even been to Europe and had clippings in his press book to show that he was the most ossified man ever seen in the Old World.

He could not brush a fly off his own nose but he had escaped from the coal mines and was thankful for his blessings. Age held no terrors for Harry. He only improved with age.

• • • •

THE professor would whinny at the mule-faced lady and utter humorous remarks about suitors waiting for her at the stage door with sprigs of hay, and she, too, had long ago ceased to participate in the merriment. It had been going on night after night, for years. The mule-faced woman, whose mother had been startled by a mule, was a citizen of Texas and Mr. Pyle said she was highly respected in her home town where she had a husband and a son about 15. She was domestic and maternal, anyway, and was very kind to the little girl without either arms or legs, a bright child of about eight, remarkably pretty and sweet, who would recite her lessons to the mule-faced woman in the alley behind the stages.

The shocking deformity of the rubber-skinned boy and the casual informality of the human pin cushion who walked around in a bathrobe with buttons sewed to his person and safety pins pinned through his hide contributed to a sense of madness when one visited the domestic circle in back. It was horrible, and, on leaving the place, one had a sense of having come out of the ether. But it drew one back. Mr. Pyle, after many years in the show business, had become a fan for his own show and was constantly tracing down rumors about a man way off somewhere who could blow smoke out of his ears or eat beer bottles or turn himself inside out like a sock.

Customers were drawn back, too, although some were so horrified that a registered nurse was kept on duty to open the clothes and break ammonia crackers under the nostrils of those who keeled over and crashed at the sight of Mr. Pyle's more gifted artists. The human pin cushion was the high-score man in knocking them off their feet.

Far be it from me to argue with a determined woman, but I believe Miss Sibley, after a brief professional career among the strange people, will always be hearing a far-away call from her art, which is like opium.

Shakespeare, 1935

By

William Lyon Phelps

APART from Shakespeare's supreme genius as a poet, he was the greatest playwright who ever lived. If we took merely the plots of his best plays and rewrote them in prose they would be thrilling. The interesting experiment of playing "Hamlet" in modern clothes, which shocked so many people, was an additional proof that Shakespeare was just as great in the theater as he is in literature.

• • • •

Every actor who is worth his salt is eager to play Shakespeare and he ought to be; for what a satisfaction it must be to interpret those immortal characters and speak those immortal lines!

The greatest single event in the American theater during the whole season of 1934-1935 was Katharine Cornell's production of "Romeo and Juliet;" it is good news that she will repeat that during the coming season, and perhaps appear in other works by Shakespeare.

And if all present plans are carried through, this coming season in America is going to be the most remarkable season for Shakespeare in my recollection. Two of our foremost artists, Lynn Fontanne and Alfred Lunt, perhaps weary of playing unimportant and trivial parts, have revived "The Taming of the Shrew," for which they seem ideally fitted. It is a great production.

• • • •

Philip Merivale, one of the best of living actors, and Gladys Cooper, who is captivating, are going to play together in "Othello" and in "Macbeth." I can easily visualize them in these roles.

Leslie Howard, eternally young and irresistible, has announced that he will play "Hamlet." Now Hamlet is the most attractive and interesting young man in all the creative literature of the stage, from the beginning even until now. Imagine the excitement of Mr. Howard's audience as the curtain rises!

Eyes Unto The Hills

Urban Cliff Dweller Returns From The Hills Of New Hampshire Wondering Whether Exodus From Cities Does Not Have More Than An Economic Explanation.

By Ralph E. Renaud.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

New York.

THE Tennessee hillmen sing a song which chronicles the sad fate of a certain "Revenue Bill" and an outlaw named Jesse. Both of them ventured into the high altitudes which proved bad for their health, resulting in fatal complications ending in permanent residence. The song then announces, "The mountains ain't no place for bad men. Git away, git away, git away!"

Your correspondent has just returned from the New Hampshire mountains and the song is true. That isn't written as an acknowledgment of depravity but as a testimonial to the peace and serenity which lies cupped in these great ranges to slake the thirst of parched cliff-dwellers of the city. And after all, it does no harm to acknowledge a wish to be a little better, a little kinder, perhaps, after looking on the blue-violet shadowed hills. They call these mountains the Presidential Range, possibly as a suggestion of that massive sincerity and breadth of vision the leader of a restless people should have.

One evening, toward sunset, your correspondent went up on a high hill with a medical friend, a country doctor who was born on that hill and knows the country and the people as only a native can. The old house, more than a century in its timbers, still stood sturdily, a little weather-beaten but stanch as a ship and, like a ship, built to resist any storm the sky could brew. The stone fences, built, too, for the ages, ambled away to outline the fields or snuggle into the companionship of the gigantic, solitary elms. These shapely trees, unlike people, grow more graceful the older they get because they assume a symmetry perfected from their environment.

• • • • •

AGNARLED, Arthur-Rackamish apple tree stood in the yard, the same tree under which 40 years ago, the doctor lay and read "Treasure Island," wondering about the kingdoms of the world and the dominions of the seven seas. A few years later the budding doctor, when he wasn't haying, lay again under the apple tree reading for his examinations for the Harvard Medical School. Already, you see the world was narrowing down a bit.

But how could it ever narrow down up there on that hill? The elms began to burnish in the reddening light and their stems turned pink. Beyond, the thin fields, painfully plucked of their glacial stones, sloped away into woodland. Little farms cut soft yellow and green squares in the middle distance. Far away in the valleys church steeples rose from little villages like aspiring carpet tacks turned upward. Two lakes lay like silver paper cutouts, garnished with tiny islands, Lake Wentworth, where the old colonial governor lived in Georgian splendor, and Lake Winnipesaukee, a superb stretch of tranquil water. The Indians, our first poets, gave it that liquid name, which is said to mean "The Smile of the Great Spirit." Nevertheless, this did not prevent them from using its shores as a gathering place for their savage raid on Deerfield.

Along the horizon, for the full circle of the eye, rose the mountains, purple, lavender and blue, thrusting into the apple-green sky which supplements the scarlet of sunset. Tumble-down-Dick, a little mountain, but looming big because of its nearness. The Belmont Range, the Ossipee Range. Mount Chocorua set like a canine tooth against a drawn-back lip. And in the dim distance, pale and lovely, the great bulk of Mount Washington, pearly, yet ponderous.

• • • •

THE mountains make one homesick. It makes no difference whether you have been born in the hills, on the plains or the shore, the effect is the same. The sense of home is the sense of permanence and security. Changing constantly to outward appearance, responding every moment to the beautiful mutability of the sky, the mountains never change. They are there always, secure and firm, an anchor for all things durable and timeless.

Houseman must have been standing on some elevation, perhaps only an elevation of the spirit, when he wrote the moving quatrains:

Into my heart a wind that kills
From yon far country blows.
What are those blue, remembered hills?
What farms, what spires are those?

That is the land of lost content.
I see it shining plain—
The happy highways where I went
And can not go again.

There has been a good deal of lost content in this country in the last six years. Many have gone back to "the blue, remembered hills," the farms and spires they knew. The advantage of farms and spires, even to a newcomer, is that, in a little while, one seems to have known them always.

• • • •

THE aspect of a city will change in six months. They are always tearing down or putting up, the crowds change, the fashions change, the opportunities change. But the farms and spires remain the same and merely weather, like the rocks, so slowly that the eye, or the inner vision, doesn't notice very much. People would like to remain the same, simply because change is so inevitable. The first shock of age is little written about but it is one of the great continuing tragedies. People grow old more comfortably in the country, and really seem to last longer, because they find themselves in a more permanent adjustment. Everything is old there, even the grass, though all things are renewed each year—except the mountains.

It is difficult to believe that the 2,000,000 Americans who have gone back to the farms all returned for a mere subsistence. Eating, of course, is a difficult habit to break and the economic motive of moving to a place where meals spring out of the ground with a little coaxing accounts well enough for the great migration. But surely there were other motives. When the world is distracted and people mill about in nervous anticipation of what will happen next, peace, rest, security and some approximation of the lost content is worth shedding the delusive joys of the crowd for.

Nothing happens next on the farm. Or, at least, what happens next is not unexpected. And a farm door from which one can look out on the mountains is a portal so majestic that no architect can simulate it. It is a door into the serenity of one's own heart.

Wake Set as Goal Of New Clipper Hop

Island 3,000 Miles Beyond Hawaii Third Objective.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Aug. 7.—The third transpacific flight of the Pan-American Clipper probably will start Friday afternoon and will have Wake Island as its objective, officers of the Pan-American Airways announced today.

Wake, some 3,000 miles west of Honolulu, now has a regular Pan-American ground crew.

On her first trip the Clipper went to Honolulu and return; and on the second to Midway via Honolulu and return.

Principal operations objectives, today's announcement said, will be perfection of radio communications and further observation of meteorological data on the transpacific route, which eventually is to carry through to Manila and the China coast.

Bangkok, Siam, Aug. 7 (AP).—The Siamese government today approved the appointment of Frederic R. Dolbeare, former United States diplomat, as its adviser on foreign affairs. Dolbeare is to leave San Francisco Friday to come here.

No End of Books

By

Theodore Hall

For Amateur Sherlocks.

TALENT for fact has nothing to do with talent for fiction, and Edward Hale Bierstadt's bent lies decidedly with the former. When he wrote his recent novel of murder, "Satan Was a Man," he left me writhing in that state of reader's embarrassment in which we think: "Oh, dear, why did the author do this, or that? But for his factual accounts of crime—"Enters Murderers," "Curious Trials and Criminal Cases," and the like—I have nothing but admiration.

I doubt if there is anyone among us better fitted to gather just the sort of little book which lies beside me. "What Do You Know About Crime?" (Stokes, $1) is a storehouse of facts from that library—a series of questions with answers in the back of the book, which may be used to titillate your own Sherlockian nerve-ends or to bring forward at a party and employ as a parlor game. He starts off with general pointers on crime—"Can fingerprints be forged?"—answer, yes—and these are of prime interest. But very soon the antiquarian streak shows itself, and we are back among Burke and Hare and Crippen and other criminal "giants of the earth."

• • • •

LET'S try a little of it right now. Here are a few of the questions, and I'll put the answers down at the bottom of the column. 1. How accurately can the time of death be estimated by the condition of food found in the digestive tract?

2. A police officer finds a man dying of a shot wound, obviously not self-inflicted. The dying man manages to gasp, "Jim Smith shot me! I'll do for him yet!" Then he dies. Why is his last statement inadmissible in a court as a dying declaration?

3. What is one elementary test by which the forgery of a signature may be shown?

4. Were the kidnapers of Charlie Ross ever discovered?

• • • •

AT the end of Mr. Bierstadt's book are a few actual cases, in which you are given the data and asked to find the solutions. H. A. Ripley's "How Good a Detective Are You?" (Stokes, $1) presents a good deal more of the same thing—a number of "Minute Mysterious" which, because the author says crime is simple, you should be able to pierce in a twinkle.

Prof. Fordney stood looking down at the body of Donald Claggett, internationally known turfman, lying on the floor of the stall. Near the man's hand was a half-smoked cigarette. His face had been terribly disfigured by the mark of a horseshoe; the round part had made a deep impression in the skull, the heels had torn away part of the jaw.

By questioning the groom, the professor found that Claggett was 5 feet 8 inches tall; that the horse in whose stall the deed had happened was bad tempered, but not suspected of being capable of kicking the master; and that nothing had been moved except to take the horse to another stall, for fear it might kick again the man lying behind it. Prof. Fordney pondered a while, and then he knew Claggett had been murdered.

If you've got the solution already in hand, you are entitled to speak up bravely to the question, "How Good a Detective Are You?"

• • • •

ANSWERS to Mr. Bierstadt's questions. 1. The time can be indicated only approximately. The gastric juices continue to carry on the process of digestion for a period after death.

2. A dying declaration, to be admissible in court, must include the statement that the declarant knows that he is dying. In the words quoted, the sentence, "I'll do for him yet!" carries the implication that the declarant did not expect to die.

3. If the supposed forgery can be superimposed precisely over another signature it is, at least, prima facie evidence that it is false. A man almost never writes his name twice the same way.

4. They were. There were two of them and they were both shot and killed in an attempted burglary some time after the kidnaping. The New York police had their names then and, had they not been killed, it is possible and even probable that the child would have been recovered. He never was.

And this is Mr. Ripley's solution of the Fordney mystery—"A horse always kicks up. The horseshoe mark on Claggett's face showed that the blow which made it was down. His murderer nailed a horseshoe on a board and hit Claggett a terrific blow with it. His mistake was in not reversing the position of the shoe."

"That kid's a Lizzie," declared Elmer Twitchell today. "Why, my little boy Cassius—we call him 'Rummy' Twitchell—has it all over him. He is only 3½ years old, and he began smoking Havana-filler cigars before he got his first tooth. The first words he spoke were 'Gotta cigar?'

"He used to wake up in the middle of the night and set up a terrible squawking. I walked the floor with him for a long time before I tumbled to what was wrong with him. He wanted a smoke!

So we bought one of them miniature bars and put it in the nursery. He knew how to make the most delicious rum sour at 2½ years that I ever tasted. His favorite drink, though, was the gas-house punch—one schooner of dark beer and a tumbler of rye.

"Taper off? Not a chance! The Twitchells are made of sterner stuff. No Twitchell ever tapered off, not by a jugful. My father began drinking and smoking in his infancy, and his father before him. I did the same. And if little Cassius Twitchell shows any signs of getting soft and cutting down on his stogies and rum I'll shoot him. It's a Twitchell tradition."

Businessmen Criticize Taxes As Confiscatory

C. of C. Officials Hit Bill as Crudely Drawn, Hard to Administer.

tion with the pending bill, even when they were not openly hostile.

Although the Senate leadership remains insistent that the tax bill be pushed forward as rapidly as possible, more attention is being paid to contentions that it is unwise and unsound to deal hastily with so important a matter and to deal piece-meal with the Federal fiscal situation.

Such contentions were made yesterday by the commerce chamber's witnesses, who urged that action on the legislation be deferred pending a thorough study of the Treasury's needs and the formulation of a co-ordinated plan which would improve the Federal tax structure instead of making it worse, as it was contended the pending bill sugely will do.

Delay Is Urged.

Fred H. Clausen, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's finance committee and president of the Van Brunt Manufacturing Co., who set the pace for the other business spokesmen, contended that the provisions of the pending bill "may prove in practice to be tantamount to confiscation" and that they are "in our judgment highly discouraging to enterprise."

He stated the chamber was not opposed to new taxes or a revision of rates which contribute toward a balanced budget, but that it believed in the general economic interest that the provisions of the pending bill should not be enacted now and that some of them should never be enacted.

He challenged the estimate that the bill's provisions would add $270,000,000 to Treasury revenue, but held that even if that figure were accepted "it is obvious that the gap between receipts and expenditures could be narrowed by such an amount more quickly, with less economic injury if the Government cut that amount from its expenditures."

Subsequently Dr. Fred Rogers Fairchild, professor of political economy at Yale University, a noted tax expert and also a chamber spokesman, said that organization would submit a memorandum later which would indicate "the direction in which a reduction of $500,000,000 could be sought or an amount twice the most optimistic estimates of additional revenue that might be produced by the House bill."

Clausen contended that "what the country now needs is more income that may be taxed, not taxes that present the danger of driving wealth and income into the ground or into avenues of escape from taxation."

"In some circles it has often been announced that the budget cannot be balanced until there is greater business recovery," Clausen asserted. "If that be a correct thesis it can as well be said that a budget balance should be attained through maintenance of present rates of income taxes, while awaiting the larger national income and Government receipts that will accompany greater business activity."

Class Legislation Charged.

He pointed out that in 1928 "the most moderate income tax rates" since the World War yielded to the Treasury $1,164,000,000—"the highest amount in peace-time history." He emphasized that "it is the amount of taxable income and not the rates that determine revenues."

Clausen pointed out that the number of persons directly affected by the proposed surtax increases on incomes in excess of $50,000 numbered only 7,974 in 1932 and 11,016 in 1931. He contended that "singling out from the entire population a few thousand for excessive and discriminatory taxation becomes in effect a form of class legislation."

But he contended that the entire country will be affected indirectly by the proposed income rates as well as the inheritance levies because of their effect on present and future business operations.

"It is difficult to understand, and more difficult to justify, the urge to punish size, merely because of size, without regard to other factors," he continued. "Rather it should be a matter of pride that this country has sufficient natural resources and enough genius and energy among its individual citizens to build up large incomes."

He maintained that all business enterprise is attended by risks and that "new projects are highly speculative and only those of substantial means are justified in launching them." Moreover, he added, "prospective profits must be in proportion to the risks or new enterprises will not be started."

Business Must Suffer.

Pointing out the existence now of $30,000,000,000 of obligations wholly or partially tax-exempt, including $18,000,000,000 in State and local securities entirely exempt from Federal income taxes, Clausen held that individuals with incomes subjected to a 50 per cent surtax or more could better their income position by investing in tax-exempt securities.

"If individuals with substantial income, who must be relied on to assume the risks of new projects, are driven to legal avenues of avoidance of high taxes, business and employment must suffer and in the end the Government revenues, also," he observed.

Turning to the proposed graduated corporation tax, Clausen pointed out that the differential contained in the bill approved by the House was small, but that it established a precedent of a graduated corporate income tax "without relation to capital invested and based only on the size of income"—a proposal termed by him as "wrong in principle" and one that the chamber resolutely opposed.

Tax Wrong in Principle.

He held such a tax to be "indefensible" and lacking the support of any principle of taxation, equity or logical reasoning. He held it to be an income tax that "runs directly counter to the principle of ability to pay." He defended the necessity for large corporations.

Clausen argued that increased tax rates would encourage corporations to seek new capital by bond issues and borrowing, since interest paid on such transactions may be deducted, instead of issuing capital stock, thus creating a situation which would leave those corporations in another depression less able to weather the storm, with increased bankruptcies and "shock to the economic structure of the country even greater than it has been in the last few years."

Pointing out that, as the bill now stands, the proposed graduated corporation tax would produce only $15,000,000 additional, Clausen contended, that "its inclusion in the law can only have the effect of introducing another disturbing and uncertain factor in the business situation with no compensating advantage."

Clausen illustrated these points as he went along, pointing out how a tax-exempt security with a 3% per cent interest rate would yield as much net income to a taxpayer with an income in the $750,000 bracket as would a 15 per cent profit on an investment the income from which was taxable.

Risk Leads by 13,000.

Complete returns from Providence indicated that Charles F. Risk, outspoken opponent of the New Deal, had polled 48,023 votes in "Little Rhodey's" First Congressional District, against 35,054 for Antonio Prince, the Democratic candidate—this despite the fact that the same district went Democratic last November by 21,000.

Members of the Democratic right wing who commented yesterday phrased their statements carefully. Although some smilingly declined to say anything for publication, all "off-the-record" talk reflected their concern. Willingness of this group to comment at all in an admonishing vein was regarded as highly significant.

Policies Rejected.

Gerry said plainly that the upset resulted from unfavorable reception of a number of Administration bills and policies. Foremost among these he mentioned processing taxes, influx of Japanese goods, Secretary of State Hull's advocacy of "favored nations" treaties, the French treaty on lace, the utility holding company "death sentence" and last but not least, the Roosevelt tax bill.

"Business men in my State, particularly small business men, are frightened at tax bill prospects," he said. "Tuesday's election was a protest against these things, and I think it points a trend."

Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), Massachusetts, said he was aware that the processing tax, the rapid increase in the cost of living with no increase in income or wages, had created a sentiment against the Administration, but he "did not think it had reached such proportions as this election seems to indicate."

"I think it is very significant," said Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, "and indicates so far as that district is concerned a reversal of sentiment as regards certain Administration policies."

"It looks like they are starting to the right," commenced Senator Ellison D. Smith (Democrat), South Carolina.

President Roosevelt had little to say about the Rhode Island reversal at yesterday's press conference. He told reporters he knew nothing about the election until he read newspaper accounts.

But in one Democratic quarter it was stated that Postmaster General Farley knew about it before he left on his Honolulu trip—had been advised, in fact, that the outlook was none too bright for the Democrats.

Observers regarded it as significant that Republicans voting in Rhode Island's First District last November and Tuesday numbered approximately the same, whereas more than one-third of last November's Democratic vote failed to show up Tuesday.

It was the contention of some Democratic stalwarts that the Rhode Island situation was "local"—that whatever protest against processing taxes there may be in New England industrial areas is not shared by the farmers of the West and in some parts of the South — that Rhode Island has "never been a place where you could test out the sentiment of the country."

But many of the bloc of Democratic conservatives commenting concernedly yesterday were from the West and the South.

Said Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah:

"From information which I had received, I was not surprised at the results of the election in Rhode Island. The high prices on many commodities, especially foods, the feeling in many sections that the Democratic Party is swinging too much toward socialism, and that some elements in the Administration have an outright disregard for constitutional limitations—these and other conditions brought about the result in Rhode Island. I fear there will be repercussions in other parts of the United States."

Sees Food for Thought.

Senator Millard E. Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, who has outspokenly opposed many of the policies said to have contributed to the New Deal jolt in Rhode Island, was more moderate in his statement.

Whether or not the election is an indication of sentiment throughout the country, only time will tell, he said.

"Undoubtedly local conditions played some part," he commented. "But generally speaking there is food for thought for all parties concerned."

Senator Walsh, who hails from an important sector of the Northeastern industrial area, said he had expected a Democratic victory with a reduced majority.

"The only explanation that occurs to me is that certain economic policies of the Administration are unpopular in the industrial sections of the country," he said.

Hopes for Adjustment.

"I feel sure the Administration will be able to adjust its policies so as to reverse the verdict before the national election next year."

Senate Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson would make no statement, but Speaker Byrns observed that "Rhode Island has always been regarded as a Republican State," and Senator Key Pittman, President pro tem of the Senate, insisted there was no national significance in the Rhode Island vote.

The Democratic national committee had nothing to say. Spokesmen for the Republican organization in Washington and Chicago were not so chary. Representative Chester C. Bolton, of Ohio, chairman of the national Republican congressional committee, said the result "proved conclusively that the common sense of the American people finally will prevail." From Chicago, John Hamilton, general counsel of the Republican national committee, interpreted the election as a "repudiation of the policies of President Roosevelt," according to the Asociated Press.

"The contest was fought on national lines," insisted Bolton. "The Democratic candidate called on the voters to back the New Deal. They refused emphatically to back it. Judge Risk, the Republican candidate, urged the voters to repudiate the Roosevelt New Deal. His decisive election by over 11,000 votes, overcoming the Democratic lead of 21,000 in 1934, was their smashing answer."

Bolton said Rhode Island voters were "awake to the unconstitutional and unsound trend of the New Deal" and indicated by their response a "widespread resentment toward the New Deal philosophies and practices."

Remarkable Recess.

Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary said the vote showed "a very remarkable recess from the apparently very high Democratic popularity last November."

"It gives a very strong indication of a Republican victory in 1936," McNary added.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, mentioned frequently among the field of 1936 potential Republican presidential nominees, said briefly:

"Common sense is convalescing."

From Boston—Joseph B. Ely, former Democratic Governor of Massachusetts: "Disappointment over New Deal policies."

From Attleboro, Mass.—Representative Joseph W. Martin, of Massachusetts, assistant House minority leader: "The people of Rhode Island have called for an end to fantastic and unwise experimentation."

The Providence (R. I.) News-Tribune, owned by Senator Gerry, placed the responsibility on the New Deal in its leading editorial:

Warned to Go Slowly.

"Rhode Island has told President Roosevelt to go more slowly," it stated. "The voters of Rhode Island have expressed their belief that experimentation can be carried to extremes."

In a statement here, Philip H. Gadsden, chairman of the committee of Public Utility Executives, pointed out that "both the defeated congressional candidate in Rhode Island and his Democratic State committee specifically indorsed the utility 'death sentence' as one of the issues in the campaign." He said the Rhode Island vote was the first test of public opinion on the issue.

Representative Snell, in his House speech, attached especial significance to Rhode Island's rejection of a $12,000,000 bond issue sponsored by its Democratic Governor, Theodore F. Green.

He called it "the handwriting on the wall."

"The people of this country are going to reject the reckless expenditures of the present Administration," he said.

Risk, Rhode Island's new Republican Representative, is no stranger to Washington. After Army service during the war, he studied law at Georgetown University here while he worked in the Treasury Department. He is 38, married, has three children, is vigorously against the New Deal, but campaigned for the bonus.

'Mow Them Down' Is War Cry; Selassie's Son Reviews 100,000

Chiefs Report Difficulty in Restraining Hordes of Hot-Blooded Warriors, Eager to Start For the Frontier.

By the Associated Press.

Addis Ababa, Aug. 7.—A growing war fever in Ethiopia is giving chiefs a difficult time in restraining hot-blooded warriors, eager to start for frontier of Italian colonies, reports today from outlying districts disclosed.

A striking demonstration of the tribesmen's loyalty was given on the plains of northern Wollo province, near Gondar. There 100,000 warriors passed in review before 19-year-old Crown Prince Asfa Wusen.

"Ebalgume! Ebalgume!" (mow them down) repeatedly shouted the fierce black fighters. They faced Adua, 100 miles to the north, where Ethiopia administered a crushing defeat to Italy some 40 years ago. This was their forefathers' war cry.

Chiefs are hard put to it to restrain the men, in keeping with Emperor Haile Selassie's policy of not provoking trouble, so intense is the battle spirit.

The crown prince, it was said, can muster a force of some 120,000 men, 60,000 of them cavalrymen. It was expected they would bear the brunt of the first onslaught in case of hostilities, presumably at Adua.

Reports that Asfa Wusen had rebelled against his father were officially denied. It was said they apparently were based on erroneous information or a misinterpretation of the fanatic enthusiasm of his troops in review. The 19-year-old heir to the throne, it was said, has never shown the slightest disloyalty to his father. Also denied was a rumor that a Japanese military mission had started from Kobe for Ethiopia.

American and other foreign residents of the capital hailed with relief reports 3,000 gas masks have already arrived and 25,000 others are en route. The city is defenseless against bombs, but because of its 7,000-foot altitude and the distance from Italian bases it was considered doubtful if Italian planes would be able to reach the capital with heavy destructive bombs, but would have to confine aerial attacks to small gas bombs.

British Protest Filed on Attack By Italian Press

Port Said, Egypt, Aug. 7 (AP).—Transport after transport laden with Italian troops and war supplies are passing through the Suez Canal en route to East Africa, official figures disclosed today.

In the last six months some 240,000 soldiers and laborers have made the transit. Nine vessels, carrying airplanes, tanks and artillery explosives as well as men, went through on a single day recently.

Italy has paid the Suez administration $10,000,000 in canal tolls on war transports in the last three months, it was estimated.

But some of the men are returning. In the last three weeks six steamers carrying more than 5,000 Italian soldiers suffering from malaria, dysentery and typhoid have passed through returning to Italy.

Business circles here said American, British and other foreign oil and timber companies are refusing to sell goods to Italy unless they are paid in cash.

Prof. Hudson Mentioned

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Aug. 7.—Prof. Manley O. Hudson, of Harvard, was mentioned in League of Nations circles today as a possible fifth member of the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation and arbitration commission.

The name of Prof. Hudson was brought up when reliable quarters suggested that Italy might not agree to the naming of Nicolas Socrate Politis, of Greece, as fifth member. Hudson now is in Geneva.

The fact that one American, Prof. Pitman Benjamin Potter, is already a member of the commission, it was said, might prevent the naming of a second member from the United States. (Prof. Potter serves on the commission as one of the two representatives of Ethiopia.)

It was reported the Italians might not approve of Politis because he represented Greece in the League of Nations Council during the Greco-Italian conflict of 1923, when Italian forces occupied Corfu, where Politis was born.

Paris, Aug. 7 (AP).—Nicolas Socrate Politis, of Greece, was understood today to have accepted tentatively a nomination as fifth and neutral member of the Italo-Ethiopian conciliation and arbitration commission.

Premier Laval of France, who suggested Politis take the charge, conferred with the Greek and obtained the tentative acceptance.

U. S. Cotton Sought.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 7.—The Sun said today that Italy is negotiating with banks here for the financing of a large purchase of American cotton.

The banks were said to have turned attentive ears to the cotton purchase proposals.

The amount of cotton which the Italian representatives are said to be seeking was variously reported at between 250,000 and 500,000 bales, which, at 12 cents a pound, would mean a total value of between $15,000,000 and $30,000,000.

Correspondents Barred.

By the United Press.

Rome, Aug. 7.—Foreign and Italian press correspondents will not be permitted to witness Italy's grand army maneuvers, employing 500,000 men, in August and September, the war ministry announced today. The war games in the Brennero Alps will be "covered by a special military press bureau which will supply daily communiques to the correspondents.

6,000 Throng Farmers' Rally At Petersville

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 7.—Approximately 6,000 persons, including a number from Washington, Howard, Montgomery and Carroll counties, attended the third annual farmers' picnic, under the auspices of the Frederick County Farm Bureau, Grange, Federation of Rural Women's Clubs and the Farmer's Club near Petersville yesterday. Addresses occupied the morning and contests and sports were held in the afternoon.

The principal speakers were J. N. Norton, former Representative from Nebraska and now field representative of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, Washington; J. A. Doughton, president of the Production Credit Association, Baltimore, and Albert S. Goss, National Land Bank Commissioner, Washington. Norton spoke on the Federal crop curtailment program and stressed the importance of farmers' strengthening the program in order that any adjustment deemed necessary will be for their benefit. He said there is no hope of the United States soon exporting any sudplus of grain or meat products, thus making it necessary for farmers to curtail production for domestic needs in order to receive fair prices. Doughton dealt with the work of the Production Credit Association and what its branch associations have done to aid farmers in the Baltimore area, comprising Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia. Goss spoke on the work of the Federal Land Bank.

Short addresses were made by Harry H. Nuttle, Caroline County, president, and E. C. Wise, Baltimore, secretary-treasurer of the Maryland Farm Bureau Federation; David Fry, Jefferson, former master of Pomona Grange, who spoke in the place of T. Roy Brooks, Bel Air, State Grange master, and the Rev. Jacob W. Getz, of Brunswick. The speakers were presented by Wilbert L. Smith, president of the Frederick County Farm Bureau. Hugh S. Mackley, president of the Federal Intermediate Credit Bank, Baltimore, and Charles S. Jackson, president of the Federal Land Bank, Baltimore, occupied the platform with the speakers.

In the 4-H Club speedball tournament, Ballenger defeated Middletown, 13 to 1, and Frederick defeated Walkersville, 5 to 4. In the elimination, Ballenger defeated Frederick, 6 to 3. Ten entrants took part in the husband-calling contest arranged by Mrs. Thomas C. Culler, Ballenger, president of the Federation of Rural Women's Clubs. Mrs. Albert Castle, near this city, was awarded first prize and Mrs. Vincent Biser, near Monrovia, won second place. Mrs. Henry Keller, Jefferson, won the first prize in the cow-calling contest and Mrs. Herbert Duvall, near Walkersville, was awarded first prize in the hog-calling contest.

Vickers Is Due To Live After 3 Suicide Efforts

Former Maryland Official Tried to End Life in Delaware Hotel.

By the Associated Press.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 7.—An attending physician looks for the recovery of Harrison W. Vickers, jr., of Chesterton, Md., who, police say, slashed his throat and wrist while a guest in a local hotel.

Dr. Victor D. Long says he believes Vickers bled four hours before help reached him.

Vickers, 65, a lawyer and former conservation commissioner of Maryland, registered at the hotel shortly after 4 p. m. yesterday. Police say that after going to his room he swallowed eight poisonous tablets obtained in Baltimore. Next he gashed his wrists, then his throat.

He is said to have lifted the receiver of the telephone in his room. The operator notified the hotel management and an investigation followed.

Mrs. Vickers and a daughter came to Wilmington last night.

Lawrence B. Simpson was named as the seaman held in Hamburg.

Despite assurances the consul general in Hamburg was using his good offices in Simpson's behalf, the delegation made three specific demands after conferring with James Clement Dunn, chief of the Western European Division.

They were: That the United States demand Simpson's free return to the United States; that if Simpson is brought to trial he be given the right of legal defense to be furnished by the International Labor Defense Union, and that the United States assist a delegation, now in Europe to go to the concentration camp where Simpson is held and investigate his case.

Dunn informed the group the consul general at Hamburg had reported Simpson was arrested in Hamburg on June 28, charged with possession of seditious literature and with being involved with 70 others in communistic activities.

The consul general had visited the concentration camp, Dunn said, and reported that Simpson had made no complaint of his treatment.

Berlin, Aug. 7.—Reports of anti-Jewish violence, mass meetings and what apparently was the suicide of a Jew in "protective custody" marked Nazidom's drive tonight against non-Aryans. An official announcement said more measures would be adopted to halt the stream of Jews pouring into Berlin from the provinces for safety. The nature of the program was not divulged.

In small towns the drive against the Jews continued unabated. At Gladbach, Karl Frenkel, a Jewish cattle dealer who was taken into "protective custody" on a charge of racial turpitude, died from injuries suffered when he apparently jumped from the third floor of the jail.

Showers Benefit Maryland Tobacco

Crops in Southern Area Aided Materially.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 7.—Copious showers during the last 24 hours materially aided tobacco crops in Anne Arundel and other counties of southern Maryland, E. Stanley Day, county agent for Anne Arundel, announced today. The rains were the first of any consequence in 30 days.

Tobacco has suffered much damage from "firing" and "yellowing," Day said, and while growers will not realize fully on early plantings, the rains were of great benefit to the middle and late crops.

Groups of 20 growers from each of the five southern counties are planning to attend a meeting at Marlboro August 19, when Dr. W. W. Garner, chief physiologist in charge of plant and tobacco nutrition work of the United States Department of Agriculture, will speak. The conference has been arranged for growers interested in the use of artificial heat in tobacco barns to minimize damage from unfavorable weather.

Harvesting Rushed.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Danville, Va., Aug. 7.—The sun today appeared to be one of the best job-makers as Halifax and Pittsylvania County farmers availed of all the labor they could get to rescue the tobacco crop from the heat. Temperatures high in the 90s without respite for a week started to burn the lower leaves. Farmers are rushing work to pull these leaves and house them.

Relief rolls already have been considerably reduced.

ANDY SANNELLA
Hartsdale, N. Y.

"It doesn't seem possible that such a big, comfortable car can cost so little to run," Mr. Sannella says. "A number of my friends are Dodge owners and all of them tell me they are getting from 18 to 24 miles per gallon, too. And economy isn't all. Dodge also has a safety all-steel body and hydraulic brakes." Mr. Sannella is owner of a radio station in Hartsdale and has been a well-known orchestra leader and radio star for years.

"I'm always on the 'go' and I've put 14,175 miles on my new Dodge, averaging better than 21 miles to the gallon every bit of the way," writes Mr. R. L. Gieseler, of Norwalk, Connecticut.

SCIENTIFIC TESTS PROVE DODGE MORE RESTFUL!

Dr. Andrew H. Ryan, well-known authority in the field of physiological and psychological research, has just completed exhaustive tests on "auto fatigue" covering more than 50,000 miles of automobile driving. The tests were to determine the relation of "auto fatigue" to the safety and comfort of drivers of five competitive makes of cars. Dodge showed 41% to 69% less evidence of "auto fatigue" than the other cars in these tests, with resulting increase in the safety, comfort and efficiency of the drivers.

The Postural Steadiness Test (left) used by Dr. Ryan measures "auto fatigue" by the amount of body sway before and after driving. Drivers were found to sway less after driving the Dodge all day than after driving other cars.

Visual Acuity Test (right)—records reduction in eye efficiency that results from driving strain—supports conclusions reached from other tests that drivers were less fatigued after driving Dodge than after driving other cars.

My Dodge gives me 23 miles per gallon—Saves 19% on oil"

And wherever you go you hear Dodge owners talking about the sensational economy of the new Dodge. They tell how this big, luxurious car actually costs less to own than small cars of competitive makes. They say the New-Value Dodge will save them enough on gas, oil and upkeep to quickly make up the slight difference in first cost.

Trinkets Are Unearthed at Evreux, France.

By the Associated Press.

Evreux, France, Aug. 7.—Jewels, hidden for 17 centuries, were brought to light in Roman ruins near here by a local archeologist.

Once the property of some Gallo-Roman maiden, the trinkets were buried between two tiles and are in a fine state of preservation. They include a pretty gold ring with an intaglio showing Cupid seated on a hippocampus, another octagonal gold ring, a gold and jade necklace with four rows of pearls and garnets and a bracelet of polished, uncut stones joined by curiously wrought twisted gold links.

The treasure appears to have been hidden away about the middle of the second century.

'Pirate' Frocks Are Worn For Evening at Vichy

Vichy, France, Aug. 7 (AP).—"Pirate" frocks of strikingly printed linen or chintz are being worn in the evening by some of the smartest women spending the season at this French watering place. Most of them have short sleeves, snug bodies and full skirts. One green and white model is worn with a twisted turban of green crepe.

New Effects Are Achieved In Flower Arrangements

London, Aug. 7. (AP). — Hostesses here are giving as much thought to floral decorations as to their menus.

Lighter effects are now favored for marigolds. Instead of arranging them in a low bowl, they are grouped gracefully with their foliage. A deep blue china jar is generally used.

Mixed blossoms are preferred in a transparent glass bowl; or crimson and white sweet william with silvery green foliage are clustered in a moonlight glass vase.

Made-to-Order Coats Designed By Fur Doctor

He Turns Out All Kinds of Wraps and Shines in Remodeling.

By Dudley Harmon
Pinch-Hitting for Ruth Anne Davis.

ALTHOUGH the title "doctor" has always meant to us almost anything from a preacher to a veterinary, we never knew before that it could be applied to a manufacturer of fur coats. Yet right here in Washington is a gentleman who bears the distinguished title of doctor of furs. He even has a large and impressive diploma attesting to the fact that he completed four years of study in Russia in the art of turning little animals into coats.

And does he know his business! He grew up with the knowledge that a dark forest and a snowy background make a good lynx, and that the longer the hair on your silver fox, the better the scarf. Just by looking at a skin, he can tell whether or not the animal it once covered had sufficient vitamins in its diet and plenty of sunshine. In fact, he's an expert in the fur line to the nth degree.

He'll make you any kind of coat, wrap, or cape your heart desires. If you've got the kind of figure that seems to swell up and bulge under a fur coat, he'll do marvelous things in the fitting line to make you look slim and trim. His furs come from all sorts of out of the way corners of the world. Mink from Siberia, lynx from Canada, and leopards from Asia and Africa. And, of course, making the coats himself as he does, instead of buying them from the manufacturer, effects a great saving in price.

Where he really shines is in remodeling. He can take your grandmother's old sealskin, which has lain in the attic for years and years, and make it look like something from Park avenue. Your five-year-old caracul which you thought of making into a rug will regain its old chic under his magic fingers, and the mink lining in Uncle Abner's coat will emerge as a stunning scarf and muff. His prices for remodeling are extremely low.

Furs themselves never really go out of style. They're just as valuable as they ever were until they actually fall to pieces. It's silly to toss them away just because the design is out of date, when that can be remedied so easily. So gather up your outmoded leopard and take it to the doctor. He'll effect a rapid cure.

Lotion For Frizzy Permanents.

THE OTHER DAY a friend came to us with a problem.

"Where, oh where," she said, "can I find a lotion to put on my hair that will tone down my very frizzy permanent? I don't want a greasy wave set, and I'm tired of plastering my locks with water. What shall I do?"

We were frankly stumped. We trotted here and there, querying and searching, all to no avail. No one had ever heard of such a thing, although most people seemed to think it would be a good idea if such a product were invented.

Finally, however, we ran down to earth what we had been seeking. In a local department store, we found a lotion which sets the permanent and keeps the hair soft. The nicest feature about it is the fact that it is not an oily substance which leaves your hair sticky and gummy. Instead, your locks will take on a new fluff and sheen after a few applications. It puts those unruly waves back into place, and does away with frizz and kinks. It smells nice, too, as it is made of fragrant rose leaves.

Furthermore, this liquid acts as a scalp food. It feeds and nourishes the tissues, restoring health and vigor to them. Without healthy tissues, the hair never can be really lustrous and beautiful. The lotion is death on dandruff as well, and the price is only 35 cents.

Touring Is a Lot of Fun, Symphony Dancer Finds

Miriam Winslow, Who Gave Up Society for a Career, Borrows From Both Past and Present in Creating Numbers.

By Dudley Harmon.

SURROUNDED by gilt chairs, a perspiring manager, and the members of her troupe, Miss Miriam Winslow, the Boston dancer who performed with the National Symphony Orchestra last night, sat yesterday afternoon in the ballroom of a downtown hotel calmly smoking denicotinized cigarettes and sipping something long and refreshing with ice in it.

Cool and collected amid the surrounding confusion, Miss Winslow displayed a great willingness to talk about everything except herself. Modest and completely unassuming, she is a perfect example of the young career woman who has had all the advantages of a gentle and cultured background.

The daughter of a prominent Boston publisher, Miss Winslow renounced a life purely social to devote herself to her career as a dancer. Presented to Boston society several years ago, she soon discovered that a round of social activities was not everything she wanted out of life.

Abandons Society Whirl.

"It was fun for a while," she said, "and of course I had a perfectly grand time tearing around to coming-out parties and other affairs, but I found I simply could not keep up my dancing after nights of no sleep. So I gradually abandoned the debutante whirl to give the greater part of my time to my work."

"How did you get started on your dancing career?" she was asked.

"Well, I've been dancing ever since I was 10 years old, and one thing gradually led to another until I finally decided I wanted to make it my life work.

"I spent several years studying abroad, in Austria and Germany, and when I returned, decided it would be fun to have my own school. So I took over the establishment run by the Braggiotti sisters, of dancing and movie fame, which is located in Boston. That was three years ago, and I now have 180 pupils and several assistants.

Touring Great Fun.

"I started touring about a year ago, and since have been all over the country with my troupe. Much to my surprise, I discovered that touring was great fun. The life of a one-night-stander isn't half as bad as it's supposed to be; in fact, I find it very stimulating to travel from one city to another, making new contacts as I go.

"Dancing, to my way of thinking, should be something between the classical and ultramodern forms. I borrow from both the past and the present when I create, endeavoring to mingle the best of both."

As to the future of the dance in America, Miss Winslow is most optimistic. "More and more people are taking up dancing not with the idea of following it into the more technical branches, but simply for their own enjoyment," she said. "In Boston, particularly, I notice that people are getting together in little groups one or two nights a week and having a great deal of fun out of seeing what they can do in this line. Some of them are surprisingly good, too."

Likes Athletics and Books.

Miss Winslow is amazingly versatile. She is an excellent horsewoman, and has taken numerous prizes. She is a tennis player of some skill as well, and is always looking for just 30 minutes in which to sandwich a set or two. Fond of reading, she usually can be found with a book in her leisure moments. She likes to go to night clubs, but, unlike the postman who went on a walking trip for his holiday, she prefers to watch others dance rather than dance herself at such places.

Unlike many society girls, Miss Winslow encountered no family opposition in taking up a career. Her parents have become very interested in the dance, and often follow her around on her tours. If you were at the concert last night, perhaps you saw them sitting proudly in the front row.

Conventional Conduct Like Rules of Play

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

"WHAT is the value of conventions? How can I persuade my child to obey them? If, looking at them I find no moral issue involved, why should I insist upon their observance?"

The mixing of groups and nationalities since the beginning of the century, and more especially since the World War, has produced a chaos of conflicting backgrounds and traditions. Each group claims authority and infallibility, and frowns on the other. Many of the young folk, confused by the contradictions, have tried scrapping the whole of the past and starting again with no conventions and only expediency to guide them.

The results are what might be expected—confusion worse confounded. For conventions are like rules in a game. So long as one has rules and sticks to them, playing games is not hard. Certain things can and cannot be done, and one can put one's whole attention on form and skill.

The tennis player, however, who knew no rules and the one who disregarded rules would soon be in an impossible position. The game would become a free-for-all fight, and no one would have time to play, for watching his opponent and trying to go him one better. Without rules, tennis ceases to be a game and becomes either a farce or a tragedy.

So it is with conventions, and in some such way they can be explained to the children. There is no need to be dogmatic and hide-bound by conventions. Just as rules change to meet new conditions and tastes, so conventions change. But the change must be slow and acceptable to the majority, not done all of a sudden by a select few who consider themselves arbiters of customs and manners.

Treatment of Infection Noted After Acute Illness Outlined

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IT OFTEN happens that after an acute illness such as measles, influenza, scarlet fever, or septic sore throat a child will not gain. Convalescence seems to be unduly prolonged and the youngster may appear pale and listless. An examination of the urine will often disclose pus and numerous bacteria.

Now and then pus appears in the urine suddenly, with few if any beginning symptoms. The first sign of illness may be a pronounced chill, followed by a high temperature.

The characteristic symptoms are loss of appetite, nausea, vomiting and abdominal distention. If the infection persists the patient will complain of frequent urination, burning and acute pain when the bladder contracts. The temperature is usually fluctuating, depending upon the amount of absorption.

Unless complications set in the disease runs its course in from one to three weeks, provided the child is well nourished and the urinary tract is kept washed out through copious water drinking. If the condition continues, search should be made for the presence of a stone or some irritated area in the kidney, ureter, or bladder.

Treatment consists of rest and the free use of water. The chief reliance of physicians is found in some urinary antiseptic that is effective in stopping the growth of the causative organisms. It is well to keep the urine acid, as antiseptic effects are best maintained in an acid state of the urine. For this purpose ammonium chloride may be employed. Irrigation of the bladder is necessary only in stubborn chronic cases, as washing out from above by means of water drinking is, as a rule, sufficient.

MILK-EGG DISHES for HEALTH

By Dorothea Duncan.

NO ONE can blame a child for reneging at the constant appearance of milk and eggs every day in the week. That stark white glass of milk and that poached or coddled egg seven times a week is a little too much of a good thing. Of course, eggs and milk are an important part of the diet of any child and they can't be overlooked, but it is the constant appearance of the same food served in the same way that we want to avoid.

A chilly baked custard will look much more attractive to a hungry youngster than a cooked egg and a plain glass of milk. A splotch of smooth chocolate sauce or a bit of butterscotch will make the custard a dish that no child can resist.

Let's doctor up the milk a bit at luncheon and dinner. There are any number of prepared chocolate mixtures on the market that can be added to milk to make it an attractive beverage. Some have a slight malty taste which is a pleasant variation from the straight chocolate ones.

You might serve a delicious cool eggnog these hot mornings instead of the usual cooked egg and glass of milk. Beat one egg until it looks fluffy, add one teaspoon of sugar and beat again until the sugar is well mixed with the egg. Pour the mixture into a tall glass and fill to the top with icy cold milk. Add just a dash of vanilla for perfect flavor. This beverage, topped off with a scoop of vanilla ice cream, will intrigue any child and it is an easy way to get across a beverage dessert that is attractive as well as nourishing.

The eggnog flavored with a tablespoon of fresh strong coffee instead of vanilla will appeal to grownups as well as children. Following is a daily menu program including an eggnog breakfast.

"Worried Mother" Advised to Stop Ridiculing Her Daughter's Beau.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I am a daily reader of your column and enjoy it very much. I admire the keen sense of fairness you show in handling problems submitted to you for solution.

Your answer to "Worried Mother" in Tuesday's column was both logical and practical; but even so, I am taking the liberty of suggesting still another angle from which to shoot. Please accept this suggestion as a friendly contribution to a discussion among women of another one of those problems which so vitally affect our lives.

* * * *

May I suggest, "Worried Mother," that you stop ridiculing your daughter's determination to marry this semi-invalid who is 17 years her senior, and bring her into the company of younger men. If possible, invite some young man to visit in your home for a week, a week-end or a fortnight, such as a cousin or the son of old friends. Or arrange a week-end party at the beach, including the daughter's fiance and two or three lively young couples, with yourself and your husband along as pals instead of spies. Let them swim, dance, eat, sing and be merry.

* * * *

If your daughter is the healthy, normal girl you claim her to be, and her fiance the neurotic diet faddist you describe, such an excursion should be a healthful eye-opener for both of them, showing how little they can hope to have in common on the social side of life.

YOUNG WIFE.

Think Before Interfering.

DEAR YOUNG WIFE: It is very kind of you to make this friendly suggestion to "Worried Mother." There is a possibility it might prove entirely efficacious. And, of course, there is likewise the possibility that the 23-year-old daughter and the 40-year-old man might be ideally happy together, as husband and wife. It is always wise to think at least a half dozen times before attempting to stem the course of another's life.

M. H.

Perils Reduced In Childbirth, Physician Says

Modern Tendency to Avoid All Pain Is Risky, Dr. Maclean Warns.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

IN THE LIGHT of modern hospital facilities, skilled obstetricians, and the latest scientific discoveries for alleviating the dangers of childbirth, is it safe to have a baby today?

"Yes—and no," said Sir Ewen Maclean, noted British obstetrician, when the question was put to him yesterday. A former president of the British Medical Association, Dr. Maclean was one of the 100-odd physicians who visited in Washington the past two days on their way to the medical conference in Melbourne, Australia.

Yesterday, this tall, lean man who has not only mitigated the agony of thousands of women in confinement but who, as professor emeritus of obstetrics at the Welch National Medical School has trained thousands of physicians, told something of the chances for and against the prospective mother.

Hazard Being Reduced.

"Childbirth is a hazard, a dark adventure with a somewhat uncertain outcome at its best," he said. "But it is a hazard that is now being reduced to a minimum. Given a sound body and qualified medical attention, the average woman has little to fear except, of course, some discomfort and pain."

He mentioned as reasons for risks at childbirth "incompetent medical care" and "the modern tendency to make the whole thing as painless as possible." In connection with the latter he pointed out that Caesarian sections were "being prostituted," that they were increasing at an appalling rate. "The cause for this is obvious," he said. "Women, like all other living creatures, want to escape pain. They prefer, naturally, to go to sleep and wake up with the child in their arms. And certainly this would be permissible, even desirable, if there were no risks involved. But unfortunately there are risks—many of them. Statistics prove the mortality is much higher among operative deliveries."

He further explained that even when a Caesarian section is not resorted to, women generally insist on being given an anesthetic before the alleviation of pain is absolutely necessary.

Discussing anesthetics commonly used in such cases, he said he preferred chloroform to either twilight sleep or ether. "Yet the increased use of any of these tends to lessen and enfeeble the natural processes of delivery," he went on. "In proportion to the use of any anesthetic, there is increased necessity for forcep assistance, and this in turn augments the danger of infection, which, even today, is the great bugaboo of childbirth."

Continuing in this vein, he emphasized the fact that methods calculated to diminish pain complicate labor, promote infection and substantially increase mortality.

Many Favorable Odds.

Yet Dr. Maclean is convinced the modern woman has the odds in her favor, compared with dangers besetting her feminine ancestors at childbirth. "If she is put to it, the woman today can stand as much pain as the woman who bore children when an anesthetic was an unknown quantity. Furthermore, she has the advantage of skilled assistance, where her grandmother often had to let nature take its course. But there are many instances where both the mother and child would profit if nature were given a wider range.

In this connection he told of the "Rochdale experiment," recently carried out with much success in England. In the county of Rochdale, women at childbirth were administered anesthetics only when it was absolutely necessary; instruments were not used except in extreme cases, and Caesarian sections were forgotten, he explained. "The result was that the mortality rate was reduced by half," he said.

He also stressed the importance of adequate prenatal attention and pointed out that training for motherhood should begin years before a baby is expected. Along this line he gave a few suggestions for potential mothers. He advised against both smoking and drinking "when either is indulged in to an immoderate degree; and he warned against nervous apprehension on the part of a woman approaching childbirth for the first time. "In most cases, an expectant mother who has borne children has much more courage than one whose knowledge comes chiefly from hearing other women discuss their experiences. This should indicate that with all its hazards bearing children is not so bad," he said.

He advocates "exercise both before and after a baby is expected;" he mentioned that "walking is particularly beneficial during pregnancy," and he emphasized, once more, "adequate prenatal attention from the day a woman discovers she is to be a mother."

The normal woman who follows these suggestions and who brings courage to confinement and the conviction she can survive what women in all ages have survived has little to fear at childbirth, according to Dr. Maclean.

Guests at Wakefield Manor Served Home-Cured Bacon and Spoon Bread.

By Pattie Ellicott.

A DIP in the green bordered pool, a dash up the spacious lawns to the manor house, a quick rub-down, fast dressing; then, in response to a mellow-toned Chinese gong, a sally to the breakfast room and, joy of joys, country bacon and spoon bread.

That is the early morning program for the fortunate guests at Wakefield Manor, historic home of Mrs. George Barnett, widow of the World War commandant of the United States Marine Corps. Wakefield Manor has been famed for its hospitality for three or four generations, and now especially for the unforgettable flavor of its home-cured bacon and the delectable taste of spoon bread a la Rappahannock.

Notable men and women, including President Roosevelt when Assistant Secretary of the Navy, Gen. Pershing, Army, Navy and Marine officers, Cabinet members, Senators, socialites from many cities and diplomats accredited to this post, all have visited at Wakefield Manor House and all must cherish memories of that spoon bread.

And Wakefield cured country bacon! Well, in the first place, it is cut in man-sized slices, not the thin slivers of the commercial brands. In the quaint old smoke house it has been placed with loving care, properly sugared and spiced, while pine cone and other sweet smelling woods send up their aroma from slow burning fires.

When it is served on the table every inch of it is edible, cooked to the king's taste with a golden and reddish brown glow about it and a crispness and lasting goodness to the final lingering bite.

Mrs. Barnett's cook would tell you that to make spoon bread "you take a little of this and a little of that" in common with good cooks, the world around. Yet she would approve this recipe for Southern Spoon Bread from "Every Woman's Cook Book," by Mrs. Charles F. Moritz (Cupples & Leon Co., New York). Incidentally, Mrs. Moritz comes from Birmingham, Ala., which gives her an inherent right to pass on such a recipe.

Southern Spoon Bread.

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup flour, cooked grits or other cereal
1 cup boiling water
1 cup milk
¼ cup melted butter
2 tablespoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon sugar
2 eggs

Sift cornmeal, pour boiling water over to scald, add salt, sugar, butter and milk, stir well. Let cool slightly then add well-beaten eggs, beating until smooth. Sift in slowly flour and baking powder mixed together. Beat well.

Heat two tablespoons bacon grease or butter in bottom of an earthen baking dish, turn in batter while dish it hot. Bake in moderate over 40 to 45 minutes. Serve hot.

If cereal is used instead of flour, add to cornmeal after scalding it.

Watch for this feature next Thursday.

Hosiery Goes Gay; Emerald Hue Appears

London (AP).—Slate-blue stockings are being worn with navy shoes, and bright emerald green stockings have made their appearance with a black suit and accessories of matching emerald.

Linen suits and holiday frocks take a suntan or flesh shade of hosery that exactly matches the arms. For dressy wear cobwebby black stockings have lace front-panels and silk lace gloves are now procurable to match.

Shorter Skirts Are Displayed At Paris Show

Black Crepe Cocktail Frocks of Ankle Length Are Numerous.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Aug. 7.—The biggest surprises in five years in skirt lengths and waistlines distinguish the present showing of winter fashions.

Shorter skirts and lower waistlines gained their most important sanction thus far when Molyneux today displayed both.

His sport and street dress of modern green beige and jerseys were designed with blouses tucked inside and unbelted skirt with waistlines an inch above the hipbones and hemlines 13 to 14 inches from the ground.

Longer Afternoon Frocks.

Longer afternoon frocks of black crepe wool were designed with horizontal shirrings at the unbelted waistline and finished with high necklines tied with black taffeta cordings, all topped with three-quarter jackets furred with astrakhan and nutria.

There were numerous ankle-length, black crepe cocktail frocks with three and four great, red roses at the lowered neckline.

The hats were small, black, sugar-loaf toques worn dipping over the forehead and designed of panne velvet or astrakhan and trimmed in front with a bunch of anemones, fuchsia, or violets. They were encircled by veils.

Cardinal Evening Gowns.

Evening gowns were designed of cardinal and borgia red, madonna and sapphire blue, or black velvets. They were featured in instep or floor lengths, with a series of horizontal shirrings through the body, no waistline demarcation, and low decolletes with slender shoulder straps.

Evening wraps were long, circular, colored velvet capes and hip-length ermine and mink capes.

$9.59 Will Feed 8 Week, Study Shows

Rising Costs Surveyed in North Dakota.

By the Associated Press.

Fargo, N. Dak., Aug. 7.—The average family of eight in North Dakota can eat well on $9.59 a week, according to an experiment conducted at the North Dakota Agricultural College here.

Eight home economic students, under direction of Miss Alba Bales, dean of the school of home economics, experimented to determine what part rising cost of food played in preparing minimum food requirements of a family of eight, as well as in planning a balanced diet.

They found that by baking their own bread, rolls, muffins and dainties they had sufficient nourishing food and lack little to make the meals more enjoyable.

A typical day's menu was:

"Sure!—Chimmy—'dat's a used car"

"Gosh—how d'ye know?" "'Cause my popper's been takin' de funnies in de Post away fr'm me every night, an' dat's where dey advertise used cars in de Post. On de page next de funnies." Your little friend's deductions are correct, Jimmy. If his daddy did find it in The Post, you can rest assured he got a bargain, too. Tell your daddy and your big brother that every Thursday, Friday and Saturday there is an unusually large selection under the heading "A Used Car for Every Pocketbook."

Broadway

There is no vanity so ridiculous as that of a stage headliner . . . F'instance, Moore and Revel, a comedy dance team, are the applause hit of the big vaudeville bill at the Capitol Theater this week . . . You might think that in appreciation of this team's sock specialty, Lou Holtz, Belle Baker and Block and Sully would insist on including them in the afterpiece of the show, the comedy finale . . . No indeedy! . . . Moore and Revel are carefully ignored and are not permitted onstage in the finale . . . The reason is that they are too good, and when an act is too good it is too dangerous . . . Probably the headline acts are too busy arguing backstage . . . Holtz claims that he is responsible for the big business . . . Block and Sully argue that they're responsible . . . Belle Baker, grandest of singers, says her name is the Magnet . . . Forgetting, just as they forgot Moore and Revel in the finale, that the "draw" is the combination of big names, not any one act.

Culbertson on Bridge

It is possible that several times during the play of the hand the Declarer will have an opportunity to reconstruct his opponents' hands by the counting process, or that the defenders will be able to read the distribution of Declarer's hand.

North, Dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ A 5 4 2 ♡ 10 5 3 ◇ J 7 ♣ K 8 7 6
♠ 10 ♡ K 6 ◇ 8 4 2 ♣ A Q J 9 5 4 2	N W E S	♠ Q J 9 6 3 ♡ Q 9 8 7 4 ◇ 9 3 ♣ 10
	♠ K 8 7 ♡ A J 2 ◇ A K Q 10 6 5 ♣ 3

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1◇	2♣(1)
Dbl.(2)	Pass	3◇(3)	Pass
3NT(4)	Pass	5◇(5)	Pass
Pass	Pass

1—Though East and West are vulnerable and North and South are not, West's overcall is a sound one. It is unlikely that he can be doubled and set more than two tricks at most and his bid may be the means of scaring off a no-trump contract.

2—North's penalty double of two clubs is a somewhat optimistic application of the principle of the tentative double. To double North should either have about one honor-trick more or much stronger clubs.

3—South's unbalanced distribution causes him to fear the double, but he wants to show he has a very strong hand.

4—North seeks the contract which seems safest for game.

5—If South were interested only in game, he would pass three no-trump, but from North's double he hopes to find 2½ honor-tricks or more in North's hand. Needing no particular diamond support, South would welcome a slam contract and by jumping to five diamonds, he invites North to bid it. North, having already overbid, declines.

West opened the Ace of clubs, being fearful that otherwise he would lose it. It held the trick and West continued with the Queen of clubs, thinking that if dummy's King were used to cover it, East would trump and kill the value of the club King for a later discard.

South was far too wise to make use of the King of clubs immediately. He could use the discard at a later stage as well as at this one and he was willing to wait. So on the Queen of clubs dummy played low, East discarded a spade and South ruffed. Three rounds of trumps then cleared the suit.

At this point South had a very fine start, knowing West's exact distribution. The first two tricks had revealed that West held exactly seven clubs, having followed to three rounds of diamonds. He had already shown ten definite cards in two suits. His three remaining cards were spades and hearts. It was probable he had at least one spade, so could have at most two hearts. Because of his bid, one of these must be an honor. South's next play was therefore the heart deuce.

With the cards as they were, West could not save the King. If he put up the King of hearts South would later put dummy in with the spade Ace, discard his losing spade on the King of clubs and then finesse through East for the Queen of hearts. If West played low on the heart lead, dummy's ten would be played and East's Queen would capture it. But on the next round South would play the Ace of hearts, dropping the King.

Most Incumbents Hold Places as Democrats Cast Light Vote.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 7.—As votes trickled in from outlying regions in yesterday's Democratic primary election, most of the incumbents still carried the party's stamp of approval, although several veterans were upset in the balloting and others were returned by narrow margins.

Saxon Holt, one of the State Senate's oldest members in point of service, survived the contest with his fellow townsman, A. L. Bivins, of Newport News, by a close vote, while Hill Montague, of Richmond, for ten years a member of the Senate, trailed Morgan Mills by 34 votes in the unofficial tally. He said he expected to ask a recount if the official canvass showed him trailing Mills by only a few votes.

In the Thirty-fourth District, the incumbent, W. Conway Saunders, was unseated by Hunsdon Cary with 600 votes to spare.

Count Delayed.

With the exception of scattered contests where local issues brought the voters to the polls in large numbers, the balloting was not heavy, but the large number of candidates delayed the count. Most of the candidates who expressed their views favored social security legislation and opposed a sales tax.

At Portsmouth, avowed "anti-organization" candidates, backed by Norman Hamilton, publisher of The Portsmouth Star, won the nomination for that city's two House seats. Robert W. Moffat, defeated incumbent, said Hamilton's support was responsible for the landslide victory of Allen S. Carr and J. N. Maxey. Both of the successful candidates praised Roosevelt's social security program, including old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, at the same time campaigning for direct ward representation in the council through charter change and for civil service reforms in fire and police departments.

Although the General Assembly, when it convenes here in January, will include at least 14 new faces in the Senate and 33 in the House, the change in personnel is attributable in large measure to death of incumbents and the decision of others not to seek re-election. Upsets at the polls were few.

Woodson Winner.

Senator J. Belmont Woodson in the Fourth District barely squeezed out I. Paul Wailes, of Amherst, 1,982 to 1,931, while in the Twenty-second District, Senator Hunter Miller, of Bedford, bowed to his fellow townsman, G. E. Heller.

Senator Harvey B. Apperson, of Roanoke, shaking off the challenge of the "home rule" forces which opposed him, won reelection to one of the Senate seats from the district with Leonard Huse, a home rule candidate, taking the other seat. Hal C. Tyler, another home rule candidate, ran third.

Attorney General A. P. Staples, who had shared the district's two seats with Apperson, did not seek reelection.

Home rule candidates won a clean sweep, however, in the balloting for the two seats in the House of Delegates from Roanoke, with Ray O. Lawson and M. S. Battle defeating Walter H. Scott, the incumbent.

For the Senate, 21 incumbents were renominated, five failed of renomination and nine candidates were nominated to succeed members of the last Senate who either died or failed to stand for renomination. Nominees have yet to be chosen by convention for three Senate seats and two other seats are now held by Republicans.

Those Defeated.

Those who failed in their bid for renomination were Montague, Saunders, Robert Gilliam, jr., of Petersburg, who was whipped by Benjamin Muse of the same city; Miller, who lost to Heller, and Cecil Connor, of Leesburg, who was ousted by T. B. Glasscock, of Upperville.

Vivian Page, formerly a member of the House of Delegates, was nominated from Norfolk for the Senate seat vacated by John W. Eggleston, who was appointed to the State Supreme Court of Appeals. R. K. Brock, of Farmville, was nominated to succeed the late Hunter Watson and the Democrats chose Charles Moses, of Appomattox as their candidate for the seat left vacant by the death of Senator S. L. Ferguson.

Another former member of the House of Delegates was given the Democratic Party's indorsement for promotion to the Senate when W. Stuart Moffett, of Staunton, was chosen without opposition to succeed W. H. East, who failed to run for renomination.

S. Bernard Coleman, of Fredericksburg, beat out H. H. Walton, of Louisa, for nomination to the seat vacated by Worth Smith, an unsuccessful candidate in the last gubernatorial election.

For the House 64 incumbents were renominated, 9 failed of renomination and 18 did not run. Conventions will choose nominees in other cases and Republicans hold several seats.

Judge Holds Estate's Sale Fairly Made

Owner Had Appealed on Foreclosure Near Bel Air, Md.

Claimed Farm Aid Act Entitled Him to Moratorium.

By the Associated Press.

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 7.—Attorneys for William W. Bradford today began preparations for appealing the decision of Circuit Court Judge Walter J. Preston which ratified the mortgage foreclosure sale of Bradford's estate near here.

Judge Preston handed down his decision today. A. Freeborn Brown, of Bradford's counsel, said the case would be taken to the State Court of Appeals, but did not say when the appeal would be filed.

Bradford had attempted to block the foreclosure sale through the Federal courts by seeking a six-year moratorium under the Frazier-Lemke act. Federal Judge W. Calvin Chesnut held the act unconstitutional and the Supreme Court, in another case, also held the act unconstitutional.

Sale Held "Fair."

Bradford then resumed his fight in the State courts and last month the case was tried in Hartford County Circuit Court here.

Judge Preston, in his opinion today, held that the sale to John D. Worthington for $21,500 was "fairly made." Bradford had contended that the sale should not be ratified on grounds that there was insufficient advertising, that the property was sold in its entirety and that the price was inadequate.

Future Profit Seen.

Judge Preston, in his decision, quoted from Federal Judge Chesnut's opinion:

"I conclude on the point of values that the sale price fairly represents the present market value of the property although it is entirely possible a general enhancement in price of farm lands for the possible sale of some part of this property for town lots in the next five years might enable the owner of the property to realize for the whole of it a sum substantially in excess of the sale price of $21,500."

"I entirely agree with the conclusion," Judge Preston added in his decision. "In my judgment, the sale was fairly made for an adequate price and should be finally ratified. An order will be signed accordingly."

Processing Tax Suit Filed at Baltimore

Court Asked to Restrain Collection of AAA Levy.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Aug. 7.—A suit attacking the cotton processing tax of the AAA was filed in Federal Court here today.

The action is the first to be filed here against the cotton levy, but others of a similar nature have been filed against the tax on pork and wheat.

Today's action was filed by the William E. Hooper & Sons Co., manufacturers of cotton cloth. It asks that the court restrain Louis Milburn, acting collector of internal revenue, from collecting the levy.

The complaint states that the company will have $9,343.80 in taxes due August 29. It contends that the company's competitors have obtained or will obtain injunctions against payment of the levy and can bid under the company's prices.

Bank Receiver Appeals Stock Liability Verdict

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 7.—The Court of Appeals will pass upon the recent decision of Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan and Associate Judge Frank G. Wagaman, in the stockholders' liability case of the Peoples Banking Co., Smithsburg, Md. An appeal was filed yesterday by counsel for the receiver of the bank.

The decision of the two jurists rescinded an order of June 19, 1933, requiring stockholders of the closed institution to pay to the receiver amounts equal to the par value of the shares held by them, and made the stockholders liable individually to the creditors of the bank.

Maryland Bonds Yield High Price

$100,000 Issue for Project Sets Interest Record.

By a Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 7.—The Maryland Board of Public Works, meeting here today, sold $100,000 bonds at a price that exceeded all previous records. The high bid, 109.8133, submitted by MacKubbin, Legg and Co., represented interest of 1.85 per cent. The previous low interest was 2.09 on an issue sold last April.

The bonds sold are 3 per cent certificates of the general bond issue of 1935. The proceeds will be used for rebuilding the Fifth Regiment Armory, Baltimore, damaged by fire two years ago.

Gov. Harry W. Nice, who presided at the board meeting, expressed gratification at the price, stating it evidenced the high standing of the State's credit. The bonds are dated August 15 and will be redeemable in installments from 1938 to 1950.

Motor Oil Is Destroyed As Truck Wheel Locks

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 7.—A large quantity of motor oil was destroyed this morning when a truck and trailer owned by the Stem Motor Line of Winfield, Md., and driven by N. D. Hobbs, of Mount Airy, overturned on top of Little North Mountain on Route 50, ten miles west of this city. The truck was en route to deliver the fuel to stations in West Virginia.

According to State Officer R. E. Bayliss, Hobbs attributed the accident to locking of a wheel as he started down the grade on the west side. The loss, including damage to the truck, was estimated at $1,000.

Fair's Heads Ask for Data On Paralysis

Association's Officials Query Virginia Health Department.

No Action Taken; 12 New Cases Reported, for 337 Total.

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., Aug. 7.—State Fair Association officials sought "first-hand information" on the infantile paralysis situation from the State health department today as 12 new cases increased Virginia's toll to 337 since July 1, 91 of them reported since August 1.

Col. H. B. Watkins, Danville, president of the association; Charles A. Somma, Richmond, vice president, and C. B. Ralston, Staunton, secretary, conferred with Dr. I. C. Riggin, but took no action.

Seven of today's reports were from Albemarle County, where the present attack seems to be focused. With the return of Dr. F. P. McGinnis, State epidemiologist, from Charlottesville, Dr. Riggin said his department was studying the situation there in co-operation with local authorities.

Other reports today were Botetourt, 1; Brunswick, 1; Goochland, 1; Greene, 1; Mecklenburg, 1.

In order to prevent any danger of spreading the disease further, Richmond officials announced they had canceled plans for the local delegation to go to the national jamboree in Washington August 21 to 30.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 7.—As a precautionary measure against spread of infantile paralysis in Jefferson County the board of health today posted notices imposing a limited quarantine. No cases have been reported in this county, but officials said they thought the preventive action was justified.

Children under 16 years of age are barred from attending public gatherings in the county, including theaters, moving pictures and swimming pools. Sunday schools and churches are exempt, but Maryland or Virginia children under 16 are barred from attending church or Sunday school here.

Pyromaniac Seeks Release From Jail

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 7. — John Murray, serving a 10-year prison sentence for starting a series of fires here several years ago which resulted in heavy losses, is seeking his release from prison on a writ of habeas corpus.

Murray was indicted for arson on five counts and pleaded guilty to the Danzer Lumber Co. and Lowery fires and was convicted of setting fire to the C. B. Miller store. Murray, a railroad worker, admitted that he set fire to the two places while returning from work early in the morning. All of the fires broke out about the same time, causing authorities to suspect them of being of incendiary origin.

Murray, in a letter to Judge Samuel K. Dennis of the Baltimore Supreme Court, said he was "mentally defective at the time of his arrest and trial" and that he was led to believe several defense witnesses had refused to testify in his behalf. State's Attorney Martin I. Ingram, of Washington County, will attend the hearing set for the week of August 19 at Baltimore.

Eastern Panhandle Sees Big Peach Crop

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 7.—While farmers and smaller orchardists are selling home-grown peaches locally, the Eastern Panhandle shipping season for commercial peaches will get under way about August 20 and will probably be at its highest about August 25.

In spite of winter killing, which cut the peach crop in Berkeley, Jefferson and Morgan counties, a number of carloads will be rolled from these counties, while Hampshire County has one of the biggest peach crops in recent years. Hampshire, for unexplainable reasons, escaped the winter killing, although temperatures there were as low as in other parts of the Eastern Panhandle.

Newport News Co. Low Bidder On Ships to Cost $40,000,000

Plane Carrier and Cruiser Offers Tendered by Virginia Firm.

By the Associated Press.

The Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. was low bidder yesterday on an aircraft carrier and a light cruiser, involving a total cost of approximately $40,000,000. Bids were opened by the Navy Department on 23 new vessels.

Exceptions to Navy Department bid provisions regarding labor and wages, however, were described in department circles as lending some doubt about what action the Department would take in awarding the contracts.

The Newport News company excepted to provisions in the call for bids allowing the Navy Department to determine in the event of labor trouble, whether the company should and could stop trouble. Another provision to which the Virginia yard took exception was that subjecting the bid to future legislation. It was understood that other companies made similar exceptions.

The Newport News bids on the aircraft carrier were: Base bid, $24,434,000; alternate bid, $21,247,000. The only other company bidding was the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co., with a base bid of $26,000,000 and an alternate bid of $20,812,000.

The Newport News company built the Ranger, the first American aircraft carrier built as such, and now has on its ways two others, the Yorktown and the Enterprise. Likewise it is building a cruiser, the Boise.

Lightning Hits Tree, Kills 86 Sparrows

By the Associated Press.

Princess Anne, Md., Aug. 7.—Lightning which struck a large maple tree here claimed at least 87 victims—86 sparrows and one starling.

The known death list probably would have been higher had residents discovered the death of the flocks of birds before the neighborhood cats did. The 87 victims were found on the ground in the front yard of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Gladden after the cats had had free reign for several hours.

The tree apparently was not damaged by the bolt, and the Gladden home also escaped damage.

Familiar Yarn Is Background For Fields' Fun

By Nelson B. Bell.

Probably drollest of the screen's current crop of comedians is that amiable and pudgy gentleman with the incandescent proboscis known to the trade as Mr. W. C. Fields.

In his latest charade for Paramount the former juggler is perhaps as quietly amusing as he ever has been in a story based on the henpecked husband theme. This drama of frustration bears the slightly symbolic title of "The Man on the Flying Trapeze." It was screened for the drama desks in the private projection room of the Fox Film Exchange yesterday and did much to cheer up the critical gentry on an otherwise hapless and humid afternoon.

In this subject, Mr. Fields does no juggling whatsoever—except with the English language, which he finds it difficult to command during some of the more hectic moments of his exquisite persecution at the hands of a nagging wife and a vitriolic mother-in-law, and with the traffic regulations, which he contriyes to mutilate with extraordinary skill.

Plot Runs a Bit Thin.

The fact that they ran a little short of plot in the fabrication of this one in no sense impairs its laughability as a medium for the display of the subtle talents of one of the cinema's most gifted mimes. Mr. Fields, beyond anyone who comes to mind, is blessed with the priceless endowment of a complete and utter bewilderment. Harry Langdon used to have something of the same quality in his pathetic buffoonery and Jimmy Savo is able to summon it at will, but with Fields it is an unaffected and extremely effective second nature.

The early scenes of the picture, and those which set in motion the succession of catastrophic occurrences that punctuate a day in the life of Ambrose Wolfinger, hark back to the late Kin Hubbard's quaint character of Abe Martin for their genesis. Those whose memories go back to the early days of prohibition will recall that Abe once remarked in his humorously philosophical way that "The Ez Pashes were awakened last night by burglars singing in the cellar."

Musical Applejack.

That is what awakens the Wolfingers and initiates a series of untoward incidents in their lives that supply an abundance of that type of humor which has its origin in the knowledge that humans are diverted by the spectacle of disaster overtaking their fellow men.

The star is surrounded in this picture by a group of players who find it easily within their capabilities to execute the tasks assigned them. Foremost among these associate players are Mary Brian, Kathleen Howard, Oscar Apfel and Lucien Littlefield.

Come Saturday morning, a comprehensive review of the various merits and demerits of this film will appear in this space, barring fire, flood and pestilence.

In the meantime, it will be quite all right to look forward to an hour of mild hilarity on the screen of Loew's Fox Theater, beginning day after tomorrow.

With regard to the new screen bills, it will not be necessary to wait longer than this morning to view "Jalna" at RKO-Keith's. This picturization of the $10,000 prize novel will begin its engagement on Fifteenth street today, with its successor tentatively announced for next Wednesday, thus effectually doing away for the time being with the idea that Keith's is making any pretense toward observing Friday as the regular inaugural day for its new bills. So what? So those who want to see "Jalna" in a hurry probably will go to RKO-Keith's today. In fact, Manager Hardie Meakin has practically admitted that that is the idea he has in the back of what he and I still playfully refer to as his mind! Hi, fella.

Precedes Maestro Phil.

So who should pop into the office, almost before this column got its hat off from the "Man on the Flying Trapeze" preview, but young Mr. Barney McDevitt, former avant courier for Fred Waring's Pennsylvanians and latterly the itinerant stentor for that Irish thrush, Morton Downey. Mr. Downey being firmly ensconced at the Biltmore in New York, Master McDevitt is "on loan" to Phil Spitalny to publicize the maestro's impending engagement with his "Hour of Charm" women's orchestra at the Earle Theater, beginning Friday.

Anyone who thinks Phil is crazy enough to attempt the personal government of the 32 talented young women constituting the personnel of his organization should immediately consult Dr. White, over on the Anacostia hills!

Instead of acting as a martinet, presiding over the deportment of his charges, Phil confines himself merely to explaining how he wants his music played and then swishing a baton in front of the girls' noses as an incentive to having it played that way.

A Board of Governors.

As far as the rest of it goes, the girls govern themselves by the committee method. That is to say, the "Charm Hour" orchestra has a governing board that serves also as a grievance committee, consisting of Gypsy Cooper, saxophonist; Every Kay, concert-mistress and solo violinist; Fat Harrington, first trumpet player, and Maxine Marlowe, "the girl with the man's voice." All decisions of this board are final in any matter that comes before it.

And to those who know him and the earnestness with which he pursues his profession, the surprising part of it all is that these girls actually "talk back" to their boss, when they feel that circumstances warrant it. The still more surprising part is that he listens to them.

The system seems to have worked out satisfactorily to all concerned, for Maestro Spitalny's present band is recognized as the finest of its kind in America—exponents of real music, adequately and skillfully assembled as to instrumentation and boasting an individual and collective virtuosity seldom attained.

The group is enjoying one of its most successful seasons, having recently completed an extended engagement in Chicago, where they were on the same bill with that eminent dialectician and character actor, Leo Carrillo, this week's headliner on the Earle stage.

Speaking of Leo Carrillo, this palpitating palladium wishes to acknowledge with gratitude a most cordial telegram from the distinguished comedian who is currently packing them in at the Earle. It was our intention to have called upon him backstage long before this, but circumstances are circumstances and sometimes there isn't much you can do about them. It is mandatory upon me to see him now, if, for no other reason, to refute both the expressed and the implied flattery of his westernunion. It won't take long.

Irish to The Core!

When "The Irish In Us," starring James Cagney, with Pat O'Brien and Frank McHugh, opens on the screen at the Earle Theater on Friday, an added Irish flavor will be supplied the bill from the orchestra pit this side the footlights.

C. Frederick Clark, "Freddie" to youse guys, has arranged an "Irish Melodies" overture during which Bert Granoff will sing at least two numbers.

Since the completion of his full year as tenor soloist with the Earle Orchestra, new distinctions have come to Mr. Granoff. He was, for example, the first guest vocalist to be heard with Dr. Kindler's National Symphony Orchestra in their "sunset symphonies" series of concerts given on the barge at the watergate Wednesday and Sunday evenings. When Production Manager Guy Wonders, of the Earle, advised Bert of the plans for the "Irish Melodies" overture, Bert was in St. Louis, Mo., about to launch himself upon a network broadcast over the Columbia system from there. He promptly relinquished that offer to return "home" to the Earle, where his greatest success has been won.

In the overture, Granoff will be heard in both "Mother Machree" and "Irish Eyes Are Smiling," which will go into rehearsal with the orchestra today.

This is certainly going to be an all-Irish week at the Earle, beginning Friday—Phil Spitalny, Bert Bagranoff and Jimmy Cagney, all of them Irish but two!

Reverting briefly to this Phil Spitalny fellow, one hears rumors that he is to be feted, along with his "board of governors," in the handsome quarters of the Variety Club in Col. Somerville's Willard Hotel tomorrow at noon. It seems a little odd that the breakfast should be held just at the crack of dawn like that, but show folks are funny people!

"Ramona" Again.

Loretta Young, vacationing in Paris, has been cabled by Darryl Zanuck, production head of Twentieth Century Pictures, recently affiliated with Fox, to report for work in the special production of "Ramona," planned as the first release under the new trade name of Twentieth Century-Fox.

This subject originally was on the production schedule as an ordinary program picture. Mr. Zanuck, however, had different ideas, scrapped all of the first plans, increased the budget available for the film and set the wheels in motion to make this one the major offering of the new year.

Miss Young has been ordered on the lot September 3, the date on which the picture will go into production.

"Ramona" was filmed in 1928 as a vehicle for Dolores Del Rio and back in the old silent days was made, too. About 1916 that would have been.

Mr. Zanuck purposes to put both of these earlier essays at the story in the shade—and probably will, although Miss Del Rio's version was not half bad.

Ticket-to-Heaven Note.

"All God's chillun gettin' wings." That is to say my esteemed contemporaries, Miss Jennings and Mr. Melcher, have bought themselves cars and are busily engaged these days driving them up our better telegraph poles and bridgeheads!

Look about you and run, don't walk, to the nearest cyclone cellar!

Try to Find the Fireplace!

In "So Red the Rose," the Paramount production in which Pauline Lord and Randolph Scott both are prominently cast, along with Elizabeth Patterson, Master Dickie Moore and numerous others, Margaret Sullavan, the star, has occasion to wear the picturesque crinolines and fluffy furbelows of the Civil War period. She is pictured here in one of the most striking of her costumes, a creation that seems peculiarly appropriate to her demure and simple type of Southern beauty. Miss Sullavan, it will be recalled, is a Virginian by birth.

At the writers' table at the Metro commissary sit many of the high salaried writers and directors. At the conclusion of the meal they roll the dice and by this process of elimination one man is handed the check. Bicounty Health Unit Is Pushed at Meeting

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charles Town, W. Va., Aug. 7.—A petition was presented to the Jefferson Couty Court here yesterday by representatives from most of the service organizations in the county asking cooperation with Berkeley County in the establishment of a bi-county health unit. The petition was presented after leaders from both of the counties had held a meeting in the Jefferson courthouse. A tri-county unit, which would include Morgan County, was also considered, but the bi-county arrangement seemed to meet with the more enthusiasm.

Drs. W. A. Wallace and Edwin Cameron, of Martinsburg, emphasized the advantage of such a set-up, and C. E. Dunham, president of the Berkeley County Court, said his court was favorable to such a joint action, members of the Jefferson Court were present but gave no indication of what action would be taken.

Company to Enlarge Apple Storage Plants

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 7.—Announcement of the projected enlargement of the Inland Service Co.'s apple storage plant here to a storage capacity of 250,000 bushels of apples has been made by J. M. Rothwell, president of the corporation, an increased capacity of 80,000 bushels.

The contract, granted to Quigley Nafer, Chambersburg, Pa., calls for the completion of the structure within 60 days.

The expansion here is being matched at the company's plants at Waynesboro and Shipman, Va., Rothwell said. When the entire project is completed it will have increased the company's facilities to 1,000,000 bushel storage. The cost of the work on the three jobs was estimated at $100,000.

Husband Arrested In Slaying of Wife

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 7.—County officials are holding Thomas Hawkins, of near North Garden, in connection with the death of his wife, Charlotte Hawkins, 41.

Hawkins was arrested a few hours after his wife had been killed with a shotgun Monday morning. A neighbor called the county officers after she had been notified by a son of the slain woman. Officials said Hawkins did not make any statement. A preliminary hearing will probably be given tomorrow in the trial justices' court.

Taxpayers Protest Pay Increase to Officials

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fairmont, W. Va., Aug. 7.—Protesting salary raises, a group of 50 or more taxpayers are considering court action against officials of the town of Riversville, Marion County. The salary of Mayor Straud Freeman has been increased from $25 to $500 a year, including fees; that of Paul Hood, recorder, from $200 to $300 a year; and five councilmen will receive $30 a year instead of $25 as heretofore.

An injunction order in the Marion County Circuit Court may be sought this week, restraining payment of the salary increases.

To Enlarge Station.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

BRITISH SAILORS TOOK NAVAL BOATS OVERLAND INTO THE HEART OF AFRICA TO WREST LAKE TANGANYIKA FROM THE GERMANS DURING THE WORLD WAR...
8-8-35

STRANGE as it seems, the British sent a 28-man navy, equipped with two 40-foot motor boats, through Africa's dense jungles to Lake Tanganyika, there to win the lake from German control. The expedition traveled 20,000 miles in all.

They put their boats on a steamship, Llanstephan Castle, for passage over the sea, then mounted them on railway cars at Cape Town to be carried 2,488 miles to Elizabethville in Belgian Congo, thence on up to the railhead. There the boats had to be hauled by steam engine over 146 miles of specially constructed roads before they could be launched at the scene of action.

All this time the German forces, already in virtual command of the lake because of their small gunboats, were unaware that a navy was being hauled overland through the bush to take them by surprise. Once on the lake the British detachment won control in two battles with German gunboats, paving the way for military forces to take control of the area around the lake. Their mission completed, the naval detachment returned to England. Their travels for these two engagements totaled 20,000 miles.

Louis Stops Levinsky in First Round After 4 Knockdowns

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

IN advertising their donkey baseball game at Griffith Stadium tonight, Washington radio announcers make special note of the fact that the fans will be able to tell the ball players from the donkeys . . . What? . . . Without a scorecard? . . . If any smart baseball is played out there tonight, it will be played by the donkeys . . . in fact, if there is any baseball played at all, it will be up to the donkeys to play it . . . The only thing funnier than a radio announcer on a donkey's back is a donkey on a radio announcer's back . . . and that can happen, too . . . Fans are cautioned not to feed peanuts to the players . . . a little girl who once disregarded the warning was nipped on the hand by an announcer and has been babbling incoherently ever since . . . The game will be broadcast by radio announcers not otherwise employed . . . or perhaps I should have said not otherwise unemployed.

ROVICH.

Experts estimate that $40,000,000 has been spent by motor boat enthusiasts in attempts to win the Gold Cup, captured last week by George Reis' El Lagarto . . . When placed in competition in 1904, the Gold Cup was purchased for $730 . . . in fact, it isn't a gold cup, only gold plate on silver . . . And speaking of cups, after England again won the Davis Cup last week, it was discovered that there was no more room on the huge trophy on which to inscribe the name of the winners and the date of victory . . . The Cleland Cup, prized trophy emblematic of the sports writers' golf championship of Washington, was bought in Woolworth's tinware department for a dime and thus rescued from somebody's kitchen . . . if it were melted for the gold plate on which the winners' names, including the oversigned's, is inscribed, it would be worth approximately $30.

Joe Turner admits that he would be unable to continue as a boxing promoter were it not for the profits of his wrestling shows . . . his firm is $4,000 in the red since it started promoting boxing here . . . Bobby Goldstein, who has been mixing hard liquor and prize fighting, has resigned his job as agent for the wares of a Kentucky distillery . . . and is now employed by Milton Kronheim, Inc., local whisky distributors . . . Jimmy Erwin should have known better than to match Buck Everett against Joe Knight in Miami . . . Everett had about as much chance of winning the decision as Joe Louis would have against King Levinsky in Palestine on Rosh Hashana . . . Fighters holding licenses in the District are admitted to Joe Turner's shows for two bits . . . but they must surrender their licenses at the gate . . . an aftermath of Turner's discovery that a half-dozen hangers-on had used the same pass.

JUST to keep the records straight, Steve O'Neil, whom Cleveland fans are now hailing as the club's new manager, was a miserable flop as manager at Chattanooga a few years ago . . . but O'Neil deserves some credit for staying on the third base coaching lines even though he is manager . . . that is one job that every manager in the league, with the exception of Rogers Hornsby, ducks . . . because the third base coach gets all the blame and none of the credit no matter what happens . . . Cleveland's offer of $50,000 cash to the Browns for Catcher Rollie Hemsley still stands . . . and Hornsby is expected to take the fifty thousand before the 1936 season starts . . . Catching is the most undermanned profession in the big leagues, with three clubs, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Washington, severely handicapped by the lack of good catching.

Joe Turner is relying upon his friend Senator Pat Harrison to frustrate any attempt of the District Boxing Commission to bring wrestling under its control . . . with Senator Harrison having the ear to the White House, Police Superintendent Brown, a Boxing Commission member, has softened his pleas that supervision of wrestling be given the boxing group . . . at that, Turner should count himself lucky, with boxing commissions in most States taking 10 per cent, not 5, of the gross receipts . . . Within a month, Turner is expected to announce the new site of his winter boxing and wrestling shows.

My idea of nothing at all—A hitter getting credit for a run batted in when he hits into a double play and there happened to be a man on third base who scored . . . Joe Kuhel faking a fumble at first in an attempt to trap a base runner into dashing for second. In 6,872 attempts at the ruse since he came into the big leagues, Kuhel has succeeded in luring exactly no base runners off the bag . . . Buck Newsom's wind-up. Sitting in the stands the other day, the Washington club physician estimated that the useless energy expended by Newsom in his windmill wind-up before delivering the ball was equivalent to two laps around the track and cost him that much in stamina . . . The St. Louis Browns carrying 64 bats with them on the road. The league-leading Tigers carry only 24 bats with them and if there was anything to this business of toting of bats in great quantities, the Browns haven't proved it.

Yanks Mark Time, Divide With Sox

Cronin's Homer in 9th Wins 1st for Boston by 6-5 Score.

Finale to New York, 6-4; 33,000 Watchers Set Boston Record.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—The New York Yankees remained within four games of the league-leading Detroit Tigers today when they split a double-header with the Boston Red Sox, winning the second, 6 to 4, after dropping the opening contest, 6 to 5, before 33,000 fans, the largest mid-week, nonholiday crowd in the history of Fenway Park.

The Yankees, with Johnny Broaca being honored by a delegation of fellow townsmen from Lawrence, Mass., apparently had the first game salted away when Joe Cronin smacked a home run over the left-field fence in the ninth with two men on and two out.

It was a nip-and-tuck affair all the way, with Lefty Grove being tagged for 12 hits. The lanky southpaw went the route, however, to register his fourteenth victory of the campaign, while Broaca's setback was the fifth for the former Yale right-hander. The Yanks scored twice in the third and the Sox tied it up with a pair in their half of the frame. The Red Sox came back with a run to take the lead in their half of the sixth but the McCarthymen went ahead in the seventh when they made another pair off Grove and added another in the ninth to go into the last half of the final frame with a 5-3 advantage.

Ferrell Stopped.

The nightcap saw the Yanks stop short Wes Ferrell's bid for his nineteenth victory of the season. The ace right-hander, who has done much with the bat to win many of his own games, yielded eight hits and five runs before he was replaced by Rube Walberg at the start of the seventh. The Yanks made two more hits and another run off Walberg in the seventh and were held scoreless and hitless by Jack Wilson through the last two frames.

Lefty Gomez weakened near the end and was relieved by Pat Malone in the ninth with two on and Cronin again at bat, but received credit for his tenth victory. This time, however, Cronin grounded out.

Banish Fear Triumphs In Lincoln Fields Race

Chicago, Aug. 7 (AP).—Banish Fear, color-bearer of Louis Beyda, of Chicago, and ridden by Jockey F. A. Smith, won the top race at 7 furlongs at Lincoln Fields today with a spectacular burst of speed down the stretch.

C. V. Whitney's Pantoufle was second by three lengths. The Shady Brook Farm's Visigoth was third. Chance Line, racing for Mrs. R. Pollard and the public choice, failed to show any of his former speed and finished fifth. Banish Fear paid $12.80.

Tribe, Chisox Split Two Games

Cleveland Wins First, 5-2, but Drops Ten-Inning Finale.

By the Associated Press.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 7.—The Cleveland Indians and the Chicago White Sox split a double-header today, the Indians winning the first game, 5 to 2, and the Sox taking the second game, 2 to 1, in a grueling pitchers' battle.

The second game went ten innings, Thornton ("Lefty") Lee holding the Sox scoreless and with three hits until the Chicago half of the tenth. Ray Phelps held the Indians to six hits until he was removed for Wyatt in the ninth with two on the bases.

Cardinals Subdue Cincinnati by 4-2

Ninth Win for Hallahan, Who Is Heat Victim.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Aug. 7.—The world champion Cardinals won their sixth consecutive victory today, 4 to 2, by an early assault on Gene Schott, starting Cincinnati hurler, who was knocked out in the second inning.

Don Brennan baffled the Red Birds for the remaining 6 2-3 innings, but the damage already was done as the Cardinals had completed their scoring off Schott.

Hallahan, who was credited with his ninth victory of the season, retired in the sixth, overcome with heat.

Two walks, a sacrifice, and singles by Orsatti and Rothrock chased the Cardinals' three runs home in the second. Orsatti, who had singled, counted the fourth Red Bird tally in the first inning on Davis' single.

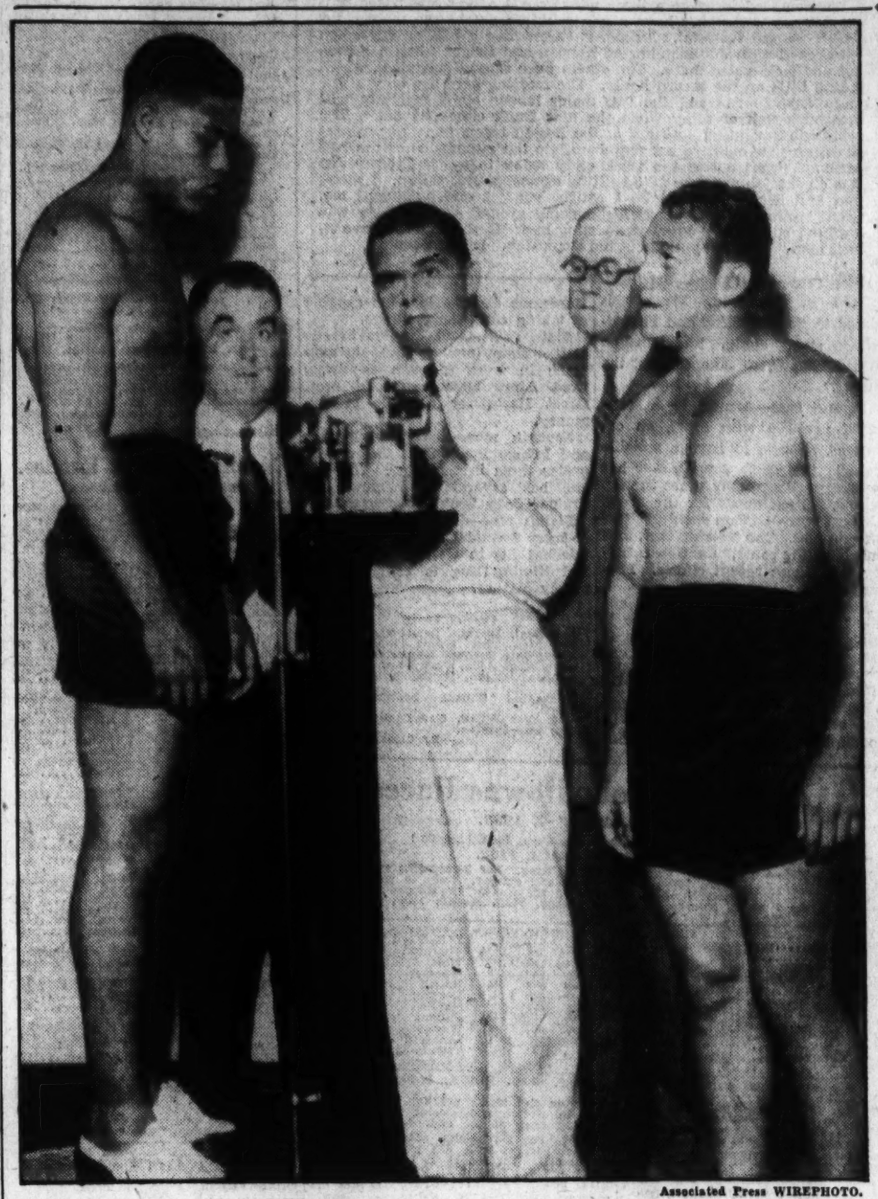
'Don't Let Him Hit Me Again,' Pleads Victim Before 40,000, 'I'm Through'



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Detroiter Betters Time of Max Baer

Calmly Stops 20th Foe, Failing to Work Up Perspiration.

By the Associated Press.

COMISKEY PARK, Chicago, Aug. 7.—King Levinsky tonight went the way of all flesh that has contacted the lethal blows of Joe Louis, Detroit's sensational brown bomber.

After 2 minutes and 21 seconds of fighting, Levinsky, battered to the floor four times, squatted on the ropes of the ring and pleaded for mercy. Chicago's glorified former fish peddler, hopelessly beaten in those exciting two minutes, sat on the bottom rope of the ring in a neutral corner, and appealed to Norman McGarrity to stop the battle.

"Don't let him hit me again. I am through," Levinsky pleaded through chalk-like lips.

40,000 Watch Battle.

Louis, fighting savagely from the start, stood immobile in midring, waiting for Levinsky to get up as he gazed into the far recesses of Comiskey Park, home of the White Sox, that held 40,000 bewildered spectators.

From the start it was obvious that Levinsky, who had fought them all, belonged to the past. In those dramatic few minutes, Levinsky landed only one solid punch, a long right that landed harmlessly behind Louis' ear.

Knocked on Haunches.

Louis' first half dozen punches landed on the half-frightened Levinsky's head and knocked him on his haunches. He regained his feet at the count of two, only to be knocked to the canvas again for the count of five. Another barrage of vicious punches dropped him for the third time for another count of five.

In desperation Levinsky attempted to escape, but Louis knocked him sagging into the ropes. As Levinsky began to sag, Louis ripped two cruel left hooks to the body. By this time Levinsky was backed into the corner and he calmly dropped his weary 197-pound frame to the bottom rope and sat there. Then he began mumbling his plea of mercy to the referee, the first plea he ever made to any man.

Beat's Baer's Time.

Louis' victory will go into the record books as a technical knockout. In stopping the Chicago walloper in 2 minutes and 21 seconds, Louis accomplished a quicker victory than Max Baer, who knocked the Kingfish unconscious in 2 minutes and 53 seconds of the second round of their battle in the Chicago Stadium last December.

The sudden ending of the battle stunned the great crowd. The spectators could hardly believe that Levinsky, who had unflinchingly waded into Tommy Loughran, Mickey Walker, Primo Carnera, Jack Sharkey, Max Baer three times, even the old Manassa Mauler himself, Jack Dempsey, without fear, could fall such an easy victim to the dynamiter from Detroit.

Is Pathetic Sight.

Levinsky presented a pathetic sight as he squatted down on the ropes. The screaming spectators had been on their feet since he was knocked down the first time, waiting for what would happen next. When Levinsky was led to his corner, a great groan swept the crowd, then cheers broke out for the 21-year-old Negro, who in 24 professional fights in 12 months, had chalked up 20 spectacular knockouts. Levinsky was his twentieth victim.

The poker-faced Louis, standing in midring while his beaten foe was being led to his corner, accepted the cheers of the crowd with no emotion. He stood there, his face expressionless while Referee McGarrity raised his right arm. Then he shuffled off to his corner to receive the grins and handshakes of his handlers. There wasn't a drop of prespiration on Louis' brow. He appeared as if he had just had a massage and hair cut.

Griffith Adds Pitcher and Infielder

Makes Deal With Cambria; Nats Off Tomorrow on Long Trip.

JOE CAMBRIA, Baltimore laundry magnate who dabbles also in baseball, unloaded two more ball players upon the Washington club yesterday.

From his Albany club of the International League, Cambria transferred Pitcher Phil Hensick, who will join the Washington club in Boston on Saturday, and from his Harrisburg club of the Keystone State League, Cambria is shipping Third Baseman Roberto Estellella to the Nats for delivery on September 5.

Clark Griffith, owner of the Nats, announced the two deals yesterday, but declined to reveal the purchase price. Both players are being bought on trial. In fact, Mr. Griffith was a bit absent-minded anent the Estellella purchase, inasmuch as his announcement of the deal yesterday was the third time within the last month he announced the deal.

Hits 17 Home Runs.

In contrast to Estellella, a Cuban who has been something of a sensation with his batting average of .334 and his 17 home runs for Harrisburg, Hensiek is the owner of a dismal record which prompts the question as to just how much he figures to bolster the Nats.

Used only in relief roles with the last-place Albany club, Hensiek, a right-hander who had a previous major league trial, participated in 39 games this season, winning five and losing eight. He will join the Nats in Boston and will be used by Manager Harris strictly as a relief pitcher. Hensiek also saw service with Minneapolis and Chattanooga.

Their scheduled double-header with the Athletics rained out yesterday, the Nats will embark tomorrow night on a 19-game road trip that will carry them into Boston and all the Western cities. They will not return to the Capital until August 31.

The Nats will play three games in Boston over the week-end and then engage in four-game series with the Tigers, Indians, Browns and White Sox successively. Henry Coppola, still suffering from a sore pitching arm, will not make the trip with the club.

Miles River Regatta Is Set to Open Today

Easton, Md., Aug. 7.—Great interest has been evinced in the annual regatta of the Miles River Yacht Club, of St. Michaels, scheduled to open tomorrow on Miles River and continue through Saturday.

The sail and power races will start at 10 a. m. on Friday.

Two courses have been arranged for sailing. The shallow-draft boats will sail on the usual inside course and the deeper draft will sail the outside course below Herring Island.

The First—and Last—Round

By the Associated Press.

ROUND ONE—Levinsky shuffled to mid ring to meet his opponent. Louis drove a light left to the face and then repeated. Levinsky eyed the Negro. Louis drove four punches to the head and Levinsky sank to the floor, but got up immediately. Levinsky backed away and threw a right to the jaw, with Louis countering with a right and left to the head. Louis drove a right to the body and threw a right and left to the head as Levinsky backed away.

Levinsky was wild with a right to the jaw and caught two rights that floored him for a count of four. He was knocked down again with another right and got up at five. Louis ripped two lefts to the body and Levinsky sat down on the bottom of the ropes. He appealed to the referee that he had had enough. Louis then dug two vicious left hooks into his body. Then Referee McCarthy led the beaten Levinsky to his corner.

Tuleyries Wand Wins Charles Town Opening Feature in Mud

2,500 Watch Thrilling Finish

Dutiful Second by Nose; Daily Double Returns $14.20 for $2.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., Aug. 7.—Over a track that was as sloppy as the rear of a 1910 soda fountain, horse racing returned to this mountain race track today under the auspices of the Charles Town Horse Show and Racing Association. Those in charge failed to anticipate the hunger of turf fans for their favorite sport, for although the crowd numbered only 2,500, the programs were exhausted before the special train, carrying some 300 from Washington, reached the track.

The rain of last night and this morning left the track in all the usual phrase, "sea of mud," implies, but the skies ceased to weep as the program began and the racing for the most part was interesting.

The day's feature race, a short-weight six furlongs, provided a thrilling finish with Tuleyries Wand and Dutiful noses apart in a battle to the all-important wire. Patient Saint was third in the field of eight.

Rides Two Winners.

Eddie Smith, the Washington boy, rode his second winner of the day on Tuleyries Wand and he had to put up a pounding effort to bring the mare from the back to the field in front. Dutiful, quoted at 25 to 1 on the board, appeared every inch the winner for most of the route, but Smith brought his mount forward with a rush at the far turn that was not to be denied.

Amijo Is Victorious.

Trainer and Owner Bowes Bond, who led the horsemen at the spring meeting, began this session with a winner. Amijo, ridden by Wisner, proved much the best in the mud, and scampered home at a $4.60 mutuel. Fairio was second and Tuleyries Star third.

Favorites made it two in a row when Jilted, a frequent winner in the mountains, defeated, among others, Silver Arch and Falmouth Belle to pay $4.40.

They chased Hard Chase in the third race and the filly, piloted by Johnny Shanks, led all the way to coast home ahead of Stepee and Furled Flag. The winner was the choice at $4.20.

Vernon Wisner rode his second winner of the day on Royal Veil in the sixth race at an $8 mutuel. Coat Tails led all the way in the seventh.

Suffolk Downs Race Track, Aug. 7.

Dear Al:

We managed to squeeze three winners out of the seven-race program today and didn't have a win selection out of the money, for which we are thankful. Indeed, it looked like a banner day when we clicked with Jubilee Jim, Al Neiman and Bright Bird in a row, but our luck ended there. The others were second and third, which means little on the record books. The meeting here has only a few more days to run and the two major league clubs certainly will breathe a sigh of relief when the new track closes its gates. The rather disappointing positions of the Boston teams and the prospect of cashing tickets here has dug deep into the attendance of the ball parks. I went out to the track early today to see if Trainer Joe was on the job and found him sitting against a post asleep. I shook him and he awakened. "So I caught you," I said. "Caught me, what?" returned Joe, "That horse going around the far turn was working out 5 miles and I was timing him. If you don't believe it, look here." And he pulled out his stopwatch. It was running.

BILL.

First race—Candescent seems well placed in this field. Wagner is slated to do the riding and I'm going to string along. The Heathen and Aileen C. to take care of the others.

Second race—Armful is an educated juvenile with speed on occasions. Seems to have a suitable field in this one. Song Maker has worked well and may upset the top fellow. Black Scout for the show.

Third race—Cathop shouldn't toss off this race. The Veteran is at tops and likes the route. Cantino is better than those recent efforts. Prefer for the minor award.

Fourth race—Top High gets another chance. I know this one is being primed for a win and this may be the spot. Mettle and Last Romance to battle it out for the place.

Fifth race—Advising Anna can step at this route and with Wall to do the booting I'm expecting a win. Hardware and Gusto seem capable of taking care of the others.

Seventh race—Revonoah, Pocket and Prince Pompey is the way I prefer them in this race. The top one has several good moves in Trainer Joe's book.

Charles Town.

2—Politen, Three Grand, Chisel.
3—Hinight, Frances Cooper, Sambo G.
4—Twinton, Aella, Pipe Dreams.
5—Miss Catalan, Barcelona Pete, Dunair.
6—Evening Chimes, Lodorous, Rose Marie B.

Best bet—Twinton.

Sixth race—Gold Step is in excellent shape now and should step home in front of such as these. Fred Almy appears second best. Great Haste for a piece of the money.

Seventh race—Revonoah, Pocket and Prince Pompey is the way I prefer them in this race. The top one has several good moves in Trainer Joe's book.

Miss Keeler and Mrs. Walper Gain Public Links Semifinals

Scores Low In Spite of Drizzle

Mrs. Wilkerson and Mrs. Powell Also Advance at Rock Creek.

THERE wasn't a close match in the quarter-finals of the District Women's Public Links Golf Championship at Rock Creek's course yesterday.

Little Miss Betty Keeler, defending champion, won a comparatively easy match from Miss M. Hessey, 4 and 3, and the medalist, Mrs. Leo Walper, played bang-up golf to eliminate 17-year-old Ellen Kincaid, 5 and 3.

Mrs. J. T. Powell and Mrs. Hope Wilkerson were the other semi-finalists. Mrs. Powell put out Mrs. Virginia Stokes, 8 and 7, and Mrs. Wilkerson trimmed Miss Lutie Tracy, 4 and 3.

Play in Drizzle.

The women golfers played through a morning drizzle, which in no way detracted from their fine playing. Mrs. Walper shot an approximate 37 on the first nine to take a three up lead on Miss Kincaid, who went out in 41. Mrs. Powell yielded only one hole to her opponent, and shot a 90.

Miss Keeler took an early lead against Miss Hessey, holding her advantage all the way.

Miss Keeler and Mrs. Wilkerson are due to clash at 9 a. m., today and Mrs. Powell is to oppose Mrs. Walper at 10 a. m. There were reports that Mrs. Walper would be unable to appear for her morning match due to an unexpected trip to see an ill relative in West Virginia.

First Flight.

Miss Betty Keeler defeated Miss M. Hessey 4 and 3; Mrs. Hope Wilkerson defeated Miss Lutie Tracy, 4 and 3; Mrs. J. T. Powell defeated Miss Virginia Stokes, 8 and 7; Mrs. Leo Walper defeated Miss Ellen Kincaid, 5 and 3.

Second Flight.

Mrs. Claire Archer won by default; Mrs. George Mead defeated Mrs. D. Puryear, 6 and 5; Mrs. M. Deuterman defeated Mrs. C. P. Bayer, 1 up.

First Flight Consolations.

Frederick Wins Over Union Bridge Nine, 11-5

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Frederick, Md., Aug. 7.—Frederick Hustlers defeated Union Brigde County League team at McCurdy Field, 11 to 5. The game was a hurling duel between Frank Fraley and Chambers, a right-hander from Westminster, until the fourth inning, when Chambers weakened and a double by Six, triple by James, and successive singles by Hildebrand, Fraley, Flory and Hoffman, gave the Hustlers four runs.

Brewers Drop From Valley League

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ORANGE, Va., Aug. 6.—Officials of the Orange Valley Loop Club were informed early today by Bill Fleister, manager of the Heurich Brewers, Washington entry, that the team would forfeit today's league contest, and at the same time drop from the league.

Reasons for their withdrawal, stated Mr. Fleister, was inability to meet expenses around the loop, mainly due to smallness of crowds; in no way helped by the threat of infantile paralysis that has forced several clubs to post games to later dates, and the fact that they had no diamond of their own, necessitating continuous travel.

It was generally conceded here that at no time did they have full strength in the league, having to split the club to maintain a position in the industrial loop in Washington. It is not yet known if the league will continue with seven clubs, or possibly some club enter and assume the Heurich standing which, before today's forfeited game, was fourth, having won two and lost the same amount.

Orange will journey to Culpeper tomorrow in an effort to take the locals into camp, having lost four straights, three in the first and one in the current half. Sunday at 2 p. m. Charlottesville will be engaged in a single league contest and at 4 Hack Wilson, former home-run king of the National League, and his Martinsburg All Stars will be met in an exhibition tilt.

Majestics on Road.

Majestic Radio will be busy over the week-end, playing the Marines at Quantico Saturday and at Frederick, Md., Sunday.

Minors Finally Teach Majors That Freak Lures Pay 'n' Pay

By the Associated Press.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 7.—All the "attendance booster" tricks of the medicine show barker and the candy salesman in a burlesque house are creeping into organized baseball by way of the big leagues' country cousins, the minors.

"Ladies Days" and "Synthetic Double-headers," the extreme to which the big leagues have gone in the matter of coaxing cash from the lukewarm fan, take on all the excitement of a sewing circle tea when compared with the he-man antics of the short-grass magnates.

Cincinnati packed them in this year with the innovation of night games, accompanied by fireworks and field meets, but it was an old story to the minors. Even sex appeal plays its part in whirling the turnstiles at the single-decked parks.

The far-flung system that backs up the world champion St. Louis Cardinals leads the Nation in "attendance inducements" to bring customers to its fertile farms scattered over the baseball map. President Sam Breadon and Vice President "Master Farmer" Branch Rickey overlook few bets.

The Huntington (W. Va.) Club specializes in a "fan dance" night whereby Sally Rand gives an autographed baseball to the loudest rooter, Hutchison, Kans., has a "beauty contest night"—the most recent of which drew 20,000 in a town of 27,000 souls. And that's only a start. There are:

"Blue shirt night"—Hutchison admits every customer wearing a blue shirt for 25 cents. Other specialties there include "family night" and "merchants' night," each designed to bring out the throngs.

"Bargain day"—Rochester admits a lady with escort for $1.

"Salty dogs night"—In which Huntington introduces a hired entertainer by that name to vend the concession's wares.

"Automobile night"—Dallas and Houston, Tex., give away motor cars.

The major leagues—still aloof—are catching on slowly. The "synthetic double-header," a Cardinal innovation wherein two single games are paired to make a twin bill, has fallen into disrepute along the big circuits, but "ladies days" are almost universal.

Ford Frick, president of the National League, had advised the Boston Braves to follow Cincinnati's lead in night baseball, and several other clubs have shown interest, but that wouldn't appeal to the boys back home.

Mt. Jackson Falls From League Lead

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 7.—Woodstock blasted Mount Jackson out of first place in the fastest game seen in this section for several years, here today by a 1-0 score. The game was a pitchers' battle with Jake Sheetz, Woodstock moundsman, allowing but two hits, and Branner, Mount Jackson, granting but four. The lone tally came in the eighth inning when Rhinehart doubled to center field, scoring Ring, who was on base after being hit by a pitched ball.

Edinburg faces the strong Strasburg team in the next Shenandoah County League encounter tomorrow.

Amateurs Have Virginia Open Chance

Cruickshank Favored in Saturday's Golfing But Non-Pros Stand Out.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT NEWS, Va., Aug. 7. Although the professionals, particularly Bobby Cruickshank, the defending champion, expect to steal the show in the State open golf tournament here Saturday and Sunday, there'll be laurels aplenty for the low-scoring amateur.

Time was when Billy Howell, and later, Chandler Harper ruled the simon pures and wore their crowns in kingly fashion, but this year the golfing wars have moved into late summer with the matter of Virginia's Number 1 amateur a moot question.

Bobby Reigel, who won the Southern, the biggest of the three tournaments played on Virginia soil, has the best claim to the title and should end all argument if he can set the amateur pace in the State Open.

Billy Howell, who came back out of comparative obscurity to win the State Amateur for the fourth time, has announced that he is through with tournament golf for this season, but Morton McCarthy, hard-hitting Norfolk youngster who won the Middle Atlantic title, will be in the fast field.

Big Three Listed.

Here's the way the "Big Three" of the State's amateur contingent have performed in the three tournament in Virginia this year:

Bobby Reigel—Failed to qualify in defense of his title in the Middle Atlantic at Virginia Beach, won the Southern Amateur at Richmond, lost to Billy Howell in the finals of the State Amateur at Hot Springs.

Billy Howell—Lost in the quarter-finals of the Middle Atlantic, failed to qualify in the Southern, won the State amateur.

Earl Is Dark Horse.

One of the best of the State's amateurs, Richmond's Earl Howell, may pick the Open to prove what many of the professionals say, that he is one of the Old Dominion's outstanding shotmakers. Like Saturday's child, Howell has had to work hard for a living and has had neither time nor the money to give his game the constant practice it deserves.

Chandler Harper, who has found business man golfing considerably more difficult than the amateur brand, expects to make a determined bid for the title and has put in much practice over the Old Dominion course, where the 72-hole medal tournament will be played.

Favored, however, will be Bobby Cruickshank, who'll make his bid for a third consecutive title. Jingling in his pocket will be his share of the $500 he and Tommy Armour split between them in the invitation four-ball matches at Inverness.

Harrisonburg Blanks Front Royal Nine, 1-0

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 7.—Lefty Hutchison turned in his second successive two-hit shutout last night when Harrisonburg Valley Leaguers nosed out the league-leading Front Royal All-Stars, 1 to 0.

Hutchison and Stankus engaged in an old-time southpaw pitching duel and each allowed only two hits. The game, reeled off in one hour and 20 minutes, was the fastest ever played here.

Celts Arrange Double Bill On Sunday

Will Oppose Herndon and Mount Vernon Nines; Net Play Opens.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Aug. 7.—The St. Mary's Celtics will play their first double-header of the season here Sunday at 2 p. m. Herndon will take the field against the Celts and at 3:45 p. m. the Mount Vernon Independents will meet the locals in the night-cap.

Ray Davidson, who hurled a fine game against the Celts here for the Eagles several weeks ago, will oppose Herndon. For the Mounts, Dick Ayers, University of Virginia freshman star, has been assigned the task of stopping the Celts, should Herndon fail in the opener.

Sixteen straight games have been won by the Celtics since their defeat at the hands of the Heurich Brewers early in the season.

The Red Robin Juniors, winners of 10 games in 12 starts, will meet the local bureau of The Washington Post Carriers at 11 a. m. tomorrow at Baggett's.

Play opened in the Municipal Playground Tennis tournament. In the class for those under 15, four matches were played. Tom Peterson, of George Mason, defeated Bill Masoncupp, of Avalon, 6—0, 6—0; Helen Smith, of Avalon, defeated Gail Hoover, Potomac View, 6—0, 6—0; Miss Smith also trimmed Margaret Trewnary, 6—0, 6—0; Aline Greenwood fell before Barbara Carter, of Washington.

Manager Beach of the Celtics is arranging for another "donkey" game for local sports followers, the date of which is to be announced.

Promoter of Bout Sightless; Listens

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Joe Foley promoted his greatest fight—the Levinsky-Louis battle—tonight, but he couldn't see it.

Foley, former sports editor turned promoter, lost his sight last spring. Tonight he was seated at the ringside with his ear turned toward an announcer who broadcast the progress of the fight over telephone to 1,700 World War patients at the Edward Hines Memorial Hospital near Chicago.

Pirates' Bunt Attack Beats Cubs, 6-0

French Loses First Game Since May, Is Ejected for Protesting.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 7.—Upsetting the Chicago defense with myriad bunts while Cy Blanton hurled scoreless ball, the Pittsburgh Pirates shut out the Cubs, 6 to 0, today and handed Larry French his first starting defeat in ten weeks as they dropped the second-place club 3½ games back of the idle Giants.

Although touched for nine hits, Blanton kept them well spaced for his thirteenth victory of the season as against nine defeats. Two fast double plays in the eighth and ninth frames, the only innings in which the Cubs were able to pair hits, helped preserve the rookie right-hander's shut-out.

French, who previously hadn't lost a game he started since May 30, was banished from the game with one out in the fifth inning for a verbal attack on Umpire Stark after the latter had ruled Arky Vaughan safe on a bunt. The Chicago southpaw left the game, trailing, 2 to 0. One of the runs, both of which came in the first inning, was unearned as the result of wild throws by Third Baseman Stan Hack on consecutive bunts by Forrest Jensen and Lloyd Waner.

Rookie Finishes.

Fabian Kowalik replaced French and before the inning was over the Pirates crossed the plate two more times, singles by Bud Hafey and Lavagetto scoring the two runners the southpaw left on base. The Pirates added their other two runs on singles by Padden, Jensen and Paul Waner in the sixth.

Clyde Shoun, big left-hander purchased from Birmingham by the Cubs, made his big league debut in the last two innings and pitched scoreless ball, allowing only one of the Pirates' 14 hits.

Favorites Win In Rye Tennis Tourney

Wood Extended to Three Sets by Buxby After Morning Rain.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7 (AP).—There wasn't even the semblance of an upset today as play in the Eastern grass courts tennis championship progressed in the semifinal round at the Westchester Country Club, Rye.

Driving rain halted activities in the morning, but after lunch seven singles contests were run off and in every instance a favorite came through. With the exception of Sidney B. Wood, top-seeded men's favorite, every star won in straight sets.

Wood, playing a third-round match with Martin Buxby, of Miami, Fla., had to work harder than he had expected, Buxby carrying him to 6—4, 2—6, 6—3 scores.

Puts on Pressure.

Buxby kept the ball deep all through the match, forcing the Davis Cup alternate away from the net, and Sidney found out-steadying the Floridian from the baseline a difficult task. He put on the pressure in the final set, however, broke down Buxby's defense with some beautiful back-handers and ran out three games in a row for his victory.

In the other men's singles, Frank Parker, of Spring Lake, N. J., defending champion, and Bitsy Grant, of Atlanta, Ga., national clay court champion, gained straight-set triumphs over Henry Prusoff, of Seattle, Wash., and Ralph Minnich, of Lorain, Ohio, respectively.

Parker played the best tennis he has shown this summer to whip Prusoff, 6—0, 6—3, and Grant weathered a bad second set to win 6—0, 7—5.

Mrs. Andrus Wins.

In the women's play Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., top-seeded, disposed of a dangerous foe in defeating Helen Pederson, also of Stamford, by 7—5, 6—4 scores.

Miss Pederson hung on stubbornly but she could not match drives from back-court with the Stamford matron.

Mrs. Mary Greef Harris, of Kansas City, Mo., won the right to meet Mrs. Andrus in tomorrow's semi-finals when she defeated Eunice Dean, of San Antonio, Tex., 6—2, 6—3.

Mrs. Agnes Lamme, Rye, beat Mrs. Lillian Hester, Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—3, and Katherine Winthrop, Boston, who conquered Theodosie Smith, Los Angeles, 6—4, 6—2.

Miss Winthrop plays Mrs. Lamme tomorrow in the other women's semifinal.

Braddock May Stage Exhibition in Bristol

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bristol, Va., Aug. 7.—James J. Braddock, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, may appear in Bristol in the near future, according to local athletic arena promoters.

The champion, accompanied by Joe Gould, his manager, and two sparring mates, stopped in Bristol early Sunday morning and had a talk with local promoters. He was en route from Jenkins, Ky., where he fought Saturday night, to New York.

Braddock's manager said the champion possibly would begin a Southern tour the middle of September or the first of October, and advised local promoters to contact him before September 1.

"Out Fishin'" ∫ ∫

By Jack Hawley.

A. H. G. MEARS, of Wachapreague, Va., writes this department that fishing inland and ocean fishing are fine and his boats are averaging around 100 trout (weaks) per day, and that plenty of croakers and blues are about and awaiting your arrival and ability to catch them. The total number of channel bass caught to date is now 135, the largest, 41, 50, 52 and 58 pounds. Mr. C. E. Bernard, of Ivyland, Pa., landed a 9-foot-2-inch shark and Louis Silverstein, of Baltimore, another shark which touched the 9-foot mark on the dot. The fish were estimated to weight 475 pounds each. Before calling it a day they landed a 25-pound channel bass.

Those who have the time to journey down to Wachapreague will be interested to know Capt. Mears' prices for boat hire: For whole days, $2.50 per person; shorter hours, name your own price. (Prices for boat hire at other resorts are solicited by this column, provided the letter of quotation bears the signature of the owner.

Jack Townsend, who was fortunate in landing two nice marlin about 25 miles off the coast of Ocean City ten days ago, has repeated, this time in the company of Capt. Bill Hatch. The marlin weighed 75 pounds, was 7 feet long and had a tail spread of 26 inches. After a hard fight of 20 minutes he brought it to gaff. A few minutes later he hooked another marlin that was successful in throwing the hook and retaining his freedom. Squid was used for bait.

Capt. James D. Jarman, who sent in this report, advises the writer that marlin will continue to stay off the coast for the remainder of the summer. Tremendous catches of bluefish (up to 500 per boat) are being made at this place but all of them are very small. Channel bass fishing is over until September.

J. A. Dawkins of Arlington, Va., in company with Charles Haycraft, H. C. Powers, R. C. Powers and son, of this city, returned from a trip down to Plum Point with 50 bluefish and 4 trout, the bluefish weighing 125 pounds (total) with 12 of the lot weighing from 4 to 6 pounds each. All fish were landed near the Maryland shore under the capable guidance of Capt. Elmer Kinnaman, who is highly recommended by the party after several years' experience fishing under his banner. It is worthy of note that the trout caught were in the 4-pound class.

R. L. Ender, of the Department of Agriculture, who is fortunate in owning his fishing boat, invited several friends to join him in a trip to Barren Island Rock, just above Hoopers Island Light and, fishing off the edge of the channel, landed 100 granddad croakers and 4 trout. Hoopers Island has good fishing and should prove a good spot for this week-end.

This writer does not like repetition but it is important (now that we have such large schools of small rockfish) that anglers refrain from catching small rock unless they do so for the sport only and then return them to the water.

L. S. Corbin of Quinby, Va., (phone Belle Haven 104-F-23), says that the fishing is now at its peak and there is no reason why anglers should return home without attaining a .500 batting average. Flounders, sea bass, large trout (weaks), bluefish, large spot, hogfish, kingfish, croakers, large sharks and stingrays are being caught.

Some boatmen are still getting all they can from anglers and giving mighty little in return. This writer tried to see just how it was being done and here is what he found out without disclosing his identity: A party of four made reservations Tuesday for fishing Saturday evening and after driving a long distance with fresh shrimp and peelers were informed by the "mouthpiece" on the pier that the reservation had been cancelled. We found two other parties that had been accorded the same treatment.

The boat was still there waiting word to leave for the fishing grounds, "would we all join together and make the trip?" The other two parties did; we didn't. Here is the answer: The boat hire for four or five hours is $5.00 under five people and $1.25 for each angler over that number. Sixteen people went out in that boat and returned in 4½ hours with a tremendous catch and the hire amounted to $18.75.

Get it? By cancelling reservations they get the anglers anyway and instead of letting the boat go out for $5.00 on rate they hold it and proceed to load as many on as possible, increasing their profits and your discomfort. The drys and wets have a grand time trying to fish and keep apart.

Steel Industry, 47%, Records Broad Advance

Buying for Machinery and Equipment Held Significant.

New York, Aug. 7.—In its fifth consecutive advance since Independence Day week, steel production has risen to 47 per cent of capacity, says Iron Age today. The gain over a week ago—one point or slightly more than 2 per cent—is the smallest since the present upturn began and there are indications that production may soon level off.

Any cessation in the advance, however, is expected to be temporary, to be followed by renewed expansion in September and October. Belief is becoming widespread that the current recovery in steel output is distinct from the abortive rebounds of previous depression years and really represents the beginning of a long pull out of hard times. This view finds its basis in the absence of speculative buying, the astonishing growth of miscellaneous demand, sustained retail sales of automobiles, accumulating activity in capital goods and, of course, the pronounced buoyancy of scrap, the most sensitive barometer of the steel trade.

Scrap prices have undergone further advances in virtually all market centers. Rises in heavy melting steel prices at Chicago and Philadelphia have lifted the Iron Age scrap composite from $11.58 to $11.83 a ton, its highest level since the third week in February.

Recent orders from motor car makers include allocations by Chevrolet of flat-rolled steel products for approximately 90,000 cars. Chrysler, Buick and Packard also have bought steel, the last-named specifying rush deliveries. Ford's purchases in the last fortnight, mainly of sheets and strip steel, are estimated at close to 50,000 tons.

"Most encouraging and significant of recent developments," says Iron Age, "is the growing consumption of steel by makers of machinery and equipment representing the capital goods industries. These interests are now more active takers of steel than are producers of refrigerators, stoves, light household equipment and other consumer goods.

Wheeling Steel Mills Now on Full Time

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 7 (AP).—The Wheeling Steel Corporation ordered four new hot mills into operation today and officials said thereby came closer to capacity operation than at any time since 1929.

The four additional hot mills were started at the creek plant and 300 men were added. It is the first time this plant has run full time since 1933.

Highlights and Background Of Financial News and Trends

Stocks Continue Irregular in Moderate Dealings With Favorites at New Tops and Some Bad Breaks—Wheat Stiffens.

By Carlton A. Shively.

New York, Aug. 7.—Stocks gave up a bit more ground, but did it reluctantly and pushed forward in a few sectors, with dealings amounting to under one and a half million shares. Bonds were quiet and fairly steady. Foreign exchanges were dull. Dollars held their strength against the gold currencies, but fell away from sterling. September wheat closed ¼ of a cent higher at 90¾ cents a bushel. Hogs set another new high price for the past five years.

In the absence of exciting industrial news or developments abroad, interest in the financial community was drawn for the moment away from the clouds of the new tax bill and toward the ray of sunshine sifting through from Rhode Island. Keeping in mind the fact that one congressional election does not upset an administration, the strong tide that set in against New Deal policies as shown by the defeat of the Democratic nominee was held to be encouraging by the markets.

The more optimistic, who have felt that the New Deal was hindering rather than promoting business revival, looked to the Rhode Island results as forecasting a still newer and better deal next year; others hoped that at least some seasoning might thereby be sprinkled in legislative proposals now before the country. On the other hand, the pessimists, while glad of the election results, feared that the affair might merely spur the brain-trusters to greater efforts, partly to do as much as possible while still in power, and partly to make the next campaign issue more clear-cut.

Making Progress.

Undoubtedly, the country is tiring of the New Deal, and it is equally apparent to all who care to take a look that trade revival will proceed apace if freed from some of the restrictions put upon it by the socialistically inclined New Dealers, and if new halters are not thrown on the head of business and markets. Midweek news was mildly favorable. Production of electricity last week rose sharply. Steel trade reviews were optimistic, but Iron Age suggested that after a five-week rise in operating rate "production may soon level off," but looks for recession to be only temporary. Scrap prices continue to rise.

If deflation in bank loans continues in the commercial as well as in the securities section, it is not because business men are contracting their business nor because borrowing facilities are unavailable. Ample credit is available, but so far the large amount of business cash in the banks has taken care of the modest expansion that has gone on.

A good many persons who have watched the progress of direct lending by the Federal Reserve banks since section 13B was added to the reserve act a little more than a year ago, have felt that the whole business was a perfect example of mountains laboring and bringing forth mice. It was originally estimated in Wall street banks that there was a field for the employment of not much over $100,000,000 in working capital loans to small industry ineligible for commercial bank credit. The Reserve banks were authorized to lend up to $280,000,000.

Plenty of Credit.

They have approved a little over $100,000,000 to date, only about $51,000,000 of which has been utilized. Obvious efforts are now being made to broadcast the fact that nearly $200,000,000 still is available to lenders, with the idea of combing the field of possible applicants so thoroughly that the last dollar of alleged lack of working capital facilities may be made good, or, at least, investigated.

Congress for some months had had a fixed idea that enough facilities had not been provided for the small business man, or that the facilities existing were not doing as big a job as they might do, and a bill is pending to let other agencies take over a job which has been done so efficiently and thoroughly by the Federal Reserve banks. If anyone doubts that the Reserve banks do not take seriously the task imposed upon them under section 13B, all that is necessary is to observe the protracted weekly meetings of directors. Hours are spent weekly in analyzing the needs of small and large direct loan applicants by Reserve bank directors accustomed to dealing with larger and weightier matters.

Building Boom Gathers Force Across Nation

In a statement prepared by the Federal Housing Administration for Fenner & Beane a notable revival in building activities is revealed. Operations, according to the statement, are at a 4-year peak for the Nation with several sections recording a 5-year high; progress has been uninterrupted since the beginning of the year, and the pace was most rapid in May and June, a season usually marked by recessions. The following facts are cited:

"Building supply dealers sales for first six months averaged 35 per cent to 60 per cent over comparative totals of last year.

"Real estate market shows general betterment marked by decreased vacancies, advancing rentals, fewer foreclosures and more frequent mortgage applications.

"Week closing July 20 was peak week reported by Federal Housing Administration, with dollar volume of modernization credit and mortgages approved for insurance totaling $13,646,296.

"Reports from 215 cities estimate value building covered by permits issued in June at $52,000,000 as compared with $49,000,000 for May, an increase of 84 per cent over corresponding month of 1934.

"The Union Planters National Bank of Memphis, Tenn., has broadened its scope of credit extension for purpose of property modernization and is now lending money to citizens of States other than Tennessee. This bank has granted 2,988 modernization loans totaling $1,026,204.

"Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. reports a 50 per cent increase in number of store front modernizations handled by that company in the first six months of this year compared with same period of 1934. In value the increase is approximately 100 per cent.

"There is already direct evidence of the importance of the amendment to the national housing act, permitting insurance on loans up to but not exceeding $50,000 for the modernization of commercial and industrial properties. Income property management hotels, apartment houses, tea shops and breweries have already been granted loans for improvement programs ranging in cost from $2,000 upward to $50,000.

Relief Cohorts March to War On Black Rust

Vanguard of 2,000 Army Starts to Eliminate Barberry Bush.

By the Associated Press.

With tons of salt for ammunition, the vanguard of 2,000 relief workers marched out this week to try to drive black stem rust from the wheat belt.

S. B. Fracker, of the Agriculture Department, estimated that the $2,376,920 work relief program will hasten completion of barberry bush eradication in 17 States by from six to nine years. Only by destruction of barberry bushes, scientists have discovered, can the spread of rust be controlled. And salt, piled over the roots of the barberry, has been found to do the work most effectively.

The dreaded rust, which sends the grain market soaring when its presence is reported, as it was recently in Minnesota and the Dakotas, is a parasitic crop destroyer.

The Government began its barberry eradication program, in cooperation with the States, in 1918. From a five-year average annual loss of 80,000,000 bushels of wheat in 1915-1920, officials said the toll was cut down to a yearly average of 11,000,000 bushels in the 1925-1929 period.

Crews of from six to ten men will carry on the work relief program. Eventually 2,000 men will be given work. They will clear out intensive barberry growths, as well as destroy scattered bushes in areas previously cleaned up.

Officers' High Pay Held Up by Court

By the Associated Press.

Allenhurst, N. J., Aug. 7.—The salaries of officers of the United Piece Dye Works, Lodi, were withheld today by a chancery court temporary injunction after a stockholder charged that "lack of aggressiveness" on the part of officers and payment of excessive salaries and bonuses to executives had caused the corporation to lose more than $6,000,000 in the past three years.

Vice Chancellor Charles M. Egan ordered the officers to show, August 14, why a receiver should not be appointed, and enjoined the concern from accepting a $3,750,000 loan from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The action was brought by Salvatore M. Scasserra, a dress shop owner, of Lodi. The corporation, one of the largest in the industry, has four mills in New Jersey.

Foreign Markets.

London, Aug. 7 (AP).—Owing to the nearness of the end of the account, business on the stock exchange was restricted today. Gilt-edged securities and transatlantic issues were quiet, while home rails were firm on improved traffic returns. Brazilian bonds declined further, but mining and oil shares improved. Irregularity developed in home industrials. The market closed irregular.

Paris—A firm trend was registered on the bourse today with prices showing a slight upward movement. Rentes closed fractionally lower, while international shares held steady. The market closed steady.

What, no number? A very serious crime, fellow, and.... Oh how tall, and bold looking.
Madam, I came here in a rocket. Some men told me this was the year 7324 and...
That's correct. But your clothing...so ancient. And your bold air...so different from these weak-kneed men of today.
Listen Madam, one week ago... and I'm positive of that... it was 1935.
1935? Oh you utterly droll fellow. Such a daring yarn.
Yarn? Well Madam, I'll admit things seem terribly mixed up.... especially about this time affair.
Oh you clever rogue. And such boldness.... so rare in men of today. Sit down here and tell me your story again.

Husband Killer To Be Free Till Birth of Baby

Nancy Lee Yakel, after the excitement of killing her husband and going through a coroner's hearing, is preparing now for the birth of her child.

Judge Paul Brown, of Fairfax, announced she would not be called for a hearing by him until her "health permitted." This was accepted to mean she would remain at liberty in the custody of her attorney until the child's birth.

It is freely predicted in the county that when and if the hearing is held, it will be only a formality preliminary to releasing her from even the easy custody now restraining her.

Yesterday the 24-year-old blonde who shot her 59-year-old husband to death early Monday morning when he returned from Reno to kick in the front door of their home, was resting and "could not be disturbed," her mother, Mrs. Hortense Elliot, told a Post reporter.

Will Stay in Bungalow.

"Her plans for the next few weeks are not definite," said Mrs. Elliot, "except that we will live here until everything is straightened up."

By "here" she meant the neat bungalow in Belle Haven, Alexandria's smart little suburb—the bungalow which her wealthy and jealous husband built for her and to which he returned after a week's absence to be met with bullets.

The birth of the baby is expected in about six weeks.

Don Lee, former husband of Mrs. Yakel, although he is said to have remained on friendly terms with her since her second marriage, could not be drawn into a discussion of the case.

"I haven't anything to say about it," he declared. "I'm completely out of the matter and it's none of my business."

Interest in Belle Haven and Fairfax centered in speculation on the estate left by George A. Yakel, the slain husband. A retired contractor, he was reported wealthy. Besides his wife, he is survived by two grown children in Baltimore, Margaret, 22, and Louis, 20. Also, there is the child Mrs. Yakel expects. No will has yet been announced, nor has any statement of his been reported which might indicate the disposition of his estate.

Mrs. Yakel was released in her attorney's custody Tuesday after Coroner Ransom heard her story of how she shot Yakel when she feared violence from him, upon his stormy return from Reno, where he had gone to get a divorce and from where, she said, he sent her letters telling her to "get out" or he would kill her.

The slain man's funeral is to be held at 2 p. m. today in Druid Ridge Cemetery, Baltimore.

Woman Asks $20,000 For Cab Crash Hurts

Damages of $20,000 were asked of the Independent Taxi Owners Association, Jack Fonoroff, owner of a Diamond cab, and Glenn Curry, of the University Club, in a suit filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Viva K. Hamilton, 2535 Thirteenth street northwest.

She charged, through Attorneys Alvin L. Newmyer and David G. Bress, that both a cab in which she was riding and an automobile owned by Curry were not obeying the traffic laws when they collided at Thirteenth and Q streets northwest last June. As a result of the collision, she said, she was thrown against the side of the cab and was seriously hurt.

Cycle Rider Who Lost Leg Sues for $75,000

Charging he lost a leg when a bicycle he was riding was struck by a speeding street car at Thirty-fourth and O streets northwest, March 14, 1934, James E. Pollen, jr., a minor, through his father, yesterday brought suit against the Capital Transit Co. for $75,000.

The suit, filed in the District Supreme Court by Attorney Elmer E. Cummings and William P. Walsh, said the boy was knocked from his bicycle and hurled under the street car. The last two wheels on the left side, the attorneys said, passed over the leg and completely severed it.

Pair Draw Jail Terms On White Slave Charge

Justice F. D. Letts, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday sentenced Robert Roderick and James Martin to terms of from six months to two years in jail following their conviction on a charge of violating the white slave act.

A third defendant, a woman, was granted a dismissal by the Government. It is planned to use her as a Government witness in another case.

Rockefeller's Nephew Leaves $9,037,847

Greenwich, Conn., Aug. 7 (AP).—The late Percy A. Rockefeller, nephew of John D. Rockefeller, left an estate whose total value was $9,037,847, it was disclosed today with the filing of the inventory in the probate court. Real estate was valued at $460,500; stocks, bonds and personal property at $8,570,326.

Officer's Assailant Jailed.

Convicted of attacking a deputy United States marshal who was serving a writ on his mother, Louis Brown, 37, was sentenced to serve an indeterminate term of from 6 to 18 months yesterday. Brown, tried several weeks ago before Justice F. D. Letts, was accused of attacking Deputy Marshal William Hodge.

Courtney Ryley Cooper's '10,000 Public Enemies'

Chapter XXV.—Eleven Go Over the Wall.

The Nashes continued to like New York. They rented an apartment near Ninety-third street and Broadway and remained here some months. Meanwhile, their old friends were somewhat scattered. There had been a big bank robbery in Flandreau, S. Dak., with a tremendous amount of publicity attendant upon its exciting features. The Barker-Karpis crowd had been suspected; the gang now had grown to include several other young men, including Russell Gibson, a graduate of Missouri State Penitentiary; Jess Doyle, from Kansas State Penitentiary, and Volney Davis, a friend of Verne Miller. So, in view of the unfavorable newspaper items, the entire entourage had gone to Reno, Nev. The visit lasted about two months, until pursuit seemed to have quieted. Then everybody came back East, just about the time that Frank Nash and his woman and Verne Miller headed West. They all met at Big Louie's place, out at Fox River Grove.

Shortly after this Verne went to Kansas City and rented a bungalow. Only a few days following, the Barker-Karpis crowd, plus Eddie Green, who had happened along, and Frank Nash, started out to pay him a visit, with a stopover at Fairbury, Nebr., where the First National Bank lost $25,000 in cash and $100,000 in securities.

There was shooting during the getaway. Earl Christman, graduated at last to bank robbery, gasped spasmodically as the machine containing the outlaws careened out of town and started for Kansas City. The chase was a determined one; the men were forced to take the "cat" or unfrequented roads. There was no chance to reach a hoodlum doctor. Then Christman's chest wound became infected and soon he was dead. Somewhere between Fairbury, Nebr., and Kansas City, the car pulled off into wooded territory. There, in the gleam of the headlights, the bandits dug a shallow grave, pushed in the body, stiff with rigor mortis, and covered it.

Sale of Automobiles Is Watched by Agents.

Naturally one may wonder where the special agents were spending their time during all these periods of momentum. They were pursuing their usual relentless course—asking questions, checking telephone calls, hurrying to apartments which they reached too late. Among other things, they strove to watch the sales of all motor-car companies in the vicinity of Chicago, with an eye especially directed at Cicero. Finally they learned that a Plymouth car had been purchased by a person who had given his name as George W. Miller.

They had heard that name before, nor did they confuse it with that of Verne Miller. During the months in which they had traced Frank Nash from place to place, only to see him vanish under one of the dozen aliases which he used during this long pursuit, the special agents had learned that the description of George W. Miller, a salesman, had corresponded in every particular to the description of Nash.

Frank and his car were moving swiftly. There had been a quick return to the Chicago area following the Fairbury robbery, where the gang foregathered again at Big Louie's. Then, like the scattering of quail, they were all away again, and this time for big plans. Bailey was tired of being in Lansing Prison. If they only had guns, ammunition, and a hide-out, Lansing could not hold them.

While this was being considered, Frank Nash and Frances were again on the move. They went to Hot Springs, Ark., where another little sentimentality developed. There they were married, becoming Mr. and Mrs. George W. Miller, this in spite of the fact that Frank Nash already had a wife; the first spouse claimed his body after his death.

Once married, they celebrated by another dip into social pleasures. In this they were aided by the good-looking, almost distinguished-appearing confidence man, Mr. Richard Galatas.

Owned Race Handbook And Soft-Drink Stand.

Galatas had given up his garage now and was devoting himself, as he expressed it, entirely to gambling, owning a race-track handbook in a soft-drink emporium which sold liquor and was known as the White Front. Frank Nash and Galatas were seen together often. Soon afterward Frank took a business trip into Oklahoma.

All this time, several members of the Barker-Karpis crowd were in the vicinity of Kansas State Penitentiary at Lansing. However, even business could not halt a romance. Fred Barker had remembered the old days down at Herb Farmer's and Paula, the wife of the bank robber, whom he had met there.

The Verne Millers now were truly settled in Kansas City. They had taken a house at No. 6612 Edgevale road, in an excellent neighborhood. Vi had her child with her—the little girl was taking dancing lessons and doing very well. Vi belonged to one country club where she often played bridge. Verne Miller—all this accomplished under fake names—belonged to another. Alvin Karpis stopped in at intervals, although he was not enthusiastically welcomed. Freddie Barker was there often, except when he and Alvin had to hurry into Kansas to "see a fellow about some arrangements they were making." One day, as he lolled over a bottle of beer, Freddie's features broke into a gold-toothed grin as he asked:

"Say, whatever became of that Paula Harmon?"

Verne called his woman. "Vi, telephone Paula Harmon, down in Port Arthur, Tex. Tell her Fred's asking about her."

The call was made. Paula Harmon took an airplane out of Texas that very afternoon. By the next night she had arrived in Kansas City and became Freddie Barker's woman.

Intrigue moved swiftly these days. Down in Hot Springs, Frank Nash took various trips over into old haunts, and to various hide-outs around Pitcher, Okla. He was successful with his plans. A telegram denoting his efficiency later was sent to inform Hazel Hudson, nee Jarrett, sister of the Jarrett outlaw gang, that her sweetheart Wilbur Underhill soon would be free again. It read:

"Will cut hay on thirtieth. Have purchased six cows for delivery at Pitcher."

The "cows" were Harvey Bailey, Wilbur Underhill, and four other life-termers. The "hay" was a prison escape, the "thirtieth" Decoration Day, 1933. During the interim before this date arrived, Richard Galatas, who still only danced about the edge of real crookdom, heard a disquieting rumor. A confidence-man friend warned him that Frank Nash might not be the friend he seemed. After all, Frank Nash knew that Galatas had money; some of it was tucked away in a safety-deposit box under an assumed name; still more he kept in his home. The rumor insisted that Frank Nash intended to kidnap his gambler friend for that money.

Excitement Was Tense, Then Came Big Thrill.

On that morning of the "thirtieth" there was a ball game in the yard of Lansing State Penitentiary. The fourth inning was on, between the American Legion teams of Topeka and Leavenworth. The score was 2 to 2. Excitement was tense—suddenly there came a greater thrill. Six of the most dangerous convicts in the prison—the six "cows" mentioned in that telegram—surrounded the warden, Kirk Prather. They threw a looped wire over his head, binding him. Guns appeared from beneath convict uniforms. In the tower turrets, the guards, attempting to shoot, found that the warden had been shoved forward in such a manner as to expose him to any gunfire. Then a command sounded—the voice of Harvey Bailey, backed by that of Wilbur Underhill:

"Throw down your keys. And let down a rope and ladder!"

Eleven convicts later went over the wall, taking the warden and a guard with them. There was shooting; Harvey Bailey was wounded in the calf of his right leg, but he kept on going. The usual day of horror followed; wounded guards, stolen cars, kidnaped hostages, frightened farmers robbed of their automobiles and left stranded on country roads. For five of the convicts, there was quick recapture.

Unaided from without, with no place to go, freedom meant only misfortune. For the six, however, everything had been planned by the same methods which had been used in the Leavenworth crush-out. The car containing them sped onward toward the Oklahoma line, where the warden and guard were set out on a lonely stretch of road and told to walk back without watching the car. Then the bandits traveled onward, to their previously arranged hide-out. There all but Bailey vanished from this story; a long chase resulted in either death or capture for all but one of them. Harvey Bailey, however, must remain.

Frank and Frances In Hot Springs Retreat.

The old rule to move when the heat was on now hit Frank Nash. Away he went, in that Plymouth car, with Mrs. Nash, for a belated honeymoon. In that there was disappointment for hard-working special agents; they traced the car to Hot Springs only a few days after his departure.

Again a wandering journey ensued, finally leading to St. Paul. The Barker-Karpis boys had gone there also and a get-together meeting followed. Frank and Frances stayed overnight at the Barker-Karpis apartment. Paula made the visit quite homelike.

Now, with the crowd all hot again, there was movement and hiding. But at last the newspapers ceased printing front-page stories about the Lansing break. Frank Nash and Frances headed back to Hot Springs. That was dangerous. A lone special agent, working in occupational disguise, had learned from various members of the sporting element that Hot Springs was a favorite resting place for Frank Nash, and that sooner or later he would return.

So now, watchful eyes which had waited long caught sight of that Plymouth car and checked the license plates. A hurried call for aid was shot into Oklahoma City, where the special agent in charge made arrangements for capture. There were three officers in the party: Otto Reed, chief of police at McAlester, Okla., who had known Frank Nash in the old days, and F. J. Lackey and Frank Smith, special agents. They found Frank Nash drinking a glass of beer at the White Front. Guns drawn, they handcuffed him and put him into their car. The long chase was over. But underworld intrigue had only begun.

The car shot out of Hot Springs, leaving turmoil behind it. Immediately word had gone through town that there had been a raid by Federal officers and that Frank Nash had been picked up. Hot Springs, which heretofore had been so cool and enjoyable, suddenly began to burn up. Confidence men began packing their belongings. Big-time crooks, there to take the baths, decided to go elsewhere. A gambler who knew Dick Galatas thus described the scene to me:

"The con guys were going out like coveys of quail in front of a bird dog. Nobody knew what was going to happen—everybody thought he was next in line for the Federal dicks. It about drove Galatas crazy. He paced up and down, running his hands through his hair, and exclaiming that the Federals had ruined his town.

"'I had it in the hollow of my hand!' he said. 'Now look at it!'"

Judge Declares 2 Women Guilty In Torso Killing

Pair Will Be Sentenced Today for Murder of Chicago Man.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—Two women in their forties—each blaming the other for arranging the gruesome "torso" slaying of Ervin J. Lang, 28-year-old grocery clerk—were convicted today of his murder.

Standing before Judge Cornelius J. Harrington, Mrs. Blanche Dunkel, 43, Lang's mother-in-law, who admitted she plotted his death because of jealousy, and Mrs. Evelyn Smith, 47, who confessed that she killed him and hacked off his legs, heard the verdict which may send them to the electric chair.

"Blanche Dunkel, I find you guilty of murder as charged in the indictment," Judge Harrington said.

There was a moment of silence as Mrs. Dunkel twisted her hands nervously, fighting off the hysteria which caused her to faint in the courtroom yesterday.

"Evelyn Smith, I find you guilty * * *," the judge continued. "Sentence will be passed upon both of you at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow."

Smiles at Verdict.

Mrs. Smith, who from the witness stand told the court of Mrs. Dunkel's request that Lang be killed, of how he was stupefied with drink, drugged and then garroted in her apartment, smiled faintly as she heard the verdict.

If the women die for Lang's murder they will be the first of their sex to go to the electric chair in Illinois.

Lang was slain on the morning of July 6 after he kept an appointment with Mrs. Dunkel at Mrs. Smith's apartment. His torso was found several days later in a swamp near Hammond, Ind. Two days later Mrs. Dunkel, arrested in a hospital where she had a tonsil operation, confessed that she planned the slaying because Lang was "running around," after the death of his wife.

Confessed Doing Favor.

Mrs. Smith, former burlesque dancer whose career included several years in China and marriage to a Chinese, Harry Jung, was arrested in New York. Returned here, she confessed that she killed Lang for a promised $500 because Mrs. Dunkel "hounded me and I wanted to do her a favor."

Girl Defendant Asserts Ferris Slew Dickinson

Saw Him Stand Over Victim and Shoot, Says Dancer in New Testimony.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Aug. 7.—Florence Jackson, former burlesque dancer, made the direct charge from the witness stand today that William Lee Ferris shot Howard Carter Dickinson, New York attorney, on the night of last June 26. The Jackson woman, with her sister Loretta, and Jean Miller, are accused jointly with Ferris of slaying Dickinson in a hold-up plot.

Under cross-examination today, Florence Jackson said she saw Ferris stand over the attorney's body beside an automobile in Rouge Park and shoot. This contradicted Ferris' version of the shooting as well as testimony the Jackson woman gave under direct examination Tuesday, when she testified she did not see the shooting of Dickinson and saw no gun.

Jean Miller, whose direct examination was unfinished at adjournment today, also gave testimony differing from that given by Ferris.

Denies a Part in Shooting.

Today, Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea asked Miss Jackson whether "you saw Ferris stand over Dickinson and fire a shot at him?"

"Yes sir," she replied.

"Did you have any part in the killing of Dickinson?"

"No."

"Who, then, did kill Dickinson?"

"Hoffman," Florence replied.

Ferris has been known as William Schweitzer and Bill Hoffman. The women always refer to him as Hoffman.

Knew of No Plot, They Say.

Both Miss Miller and Miss Jackson denied they knew of any plot to rob and kill Dickinson; although such a plot, described in signed statements by the four accused, was read at the trial.

The Jackson woman testified her statement to that effect was obtained by police on the promise that she would be held only as a State witness if she signed it.

Both women witnesses today said they asked Ferris about the shooting of Dickinson, and Ferris told them to "shut up."

Long Man Leads Mississippi Race

Johnson Jumps Ahead in Vote for Governor.

By the Associated Press.

Jackson, Miss., Aug. 7.—Paul B. Johnson, one of two candidates to whom Senator Huey P. Long, of Louisiana, was said to have thrown his support, jumped into the lead in the Mississippi Governor's race late today.

Johnson topped Hugh White, wealthy lumberman, who had been leading in returns—slowly coming in from yesterday's first primary balloting.

The senatorial vote, with returns from 1,080 of 1,638 precincts, were: Johnson, 55,646; White, 55,191; Dennis Murphree, 46,805; Lester Franklin, 18,291; Dr. E. A. Copeland, 2,406.

The returns were slow in coming in because of the length of the ballots. Some 2,000 officials were voted on throughout the State.

The primary resulted in one death, at Lambert, and the theft of a ballot box at Gulfport. The ballot box was later recovered.

Sheriff W. T. Haynes said Alvin Cannon, 45, a farmer of near Lambert, was fatally wounded when he created a disturbance at a polling booth and resisted an officer's attempt to persuade him to go home.
